Mormonism's 100th Birthday

Surprise for Beethoven

Everlasting Proletariat

Religions, 3 Schools

—By Arthur Brisbane—

ON April 6 the Mormon church will be 100 years old. Plural marriage has gone, but the church remains powerful, with numbers increasing, after a century of struggle and opposition. Nearly one million Mormons will celebrate the day. The main celebration at Salt Lake City, others all over this and nearly all European countries, and in Mexico, Australia, Hawaii and the South Sea Islands.

Few religions of modern times have lasted, with strength increasing, for so long a time. The Shakers and Quakers have almost vanished, although the latter are represented in the White House. Thousands of religions have been started, few last long.

Joseph Smith, a young farmer of Seneca county, New York, with five other men, founded Mormonism. He told the five that angels had visited him and explained matters fully. They directed him to a hill near his home. There he discovered a sacred history of this continent in the days of the Indians' forefathers.

Written on plates of gold, these records were translated by Joseph Smith with the help of the Urim and Thummim, an enlightening instrument providentially hidden away with the gold plates. Its evidence and those sacred tablets, called now "The Book of Mormon," still retain power over many.

For many of us, religion is a simple matter of faith, and the many, free from troublesome questionings, are happy. For others, religion takes complicated forms. For instance, Madeline Slade, daughter of a British admiral, fighting with Gandhi in his rebellion against British rule, says: "I have not thrown Christianity overboard in embracing Hinduism. Baptized and a confirmed Christian, I never was an orthodox Christian in my heart. Neither am I now a Hindu. I first came to understand the teachings of Jesus through Mahatma Gandhi, and the Hindu scriptures. The first ray of light reached my inner being through the music of Beethoven."

How will all that read in the Angel Gabriel's record? How will Madeline Slade be received when she appears for judgment? To what heaven, Hindu or Christian, will she be assigned? And what would the heavy browed Beethoven say if he heard that he has sent an English lady to sit at the feet of a little brown mahatma with shaven head and a loin cloth for clothing?

No man dreams what strange things women can think of and do.

Col. House tells Mr. Viereck "Russia runs the machine solely for the benefit of one class the proletariat. We run the machine primarily for the individual."

Not quite accurate. Russia runs its governing machine as a sort of experimental laboratory, with the proletariat, fancy name for working people, used as raw material. We run our governing machine primarily for the benefit of great industrial and financial units. Who does not know that, knows little. Our workers get enough to live, with something extra to keep them cheerful.

With us they are the consumers as well as the producers. They use automobiles, radio sets, vacuum cleaners, bath tubs, created by them, and are content. More than 90 in 100 Americans die owning less than $100. But as they cannot take even that much with them it makes little difference. Russia is making an interesting experiment, and, incidentally, worrying considerably the financial-industrial powers of other nations with the threat of competition based on a wage cost basis.

The so-called war against religion, denied by the head of the Russian church and the chief rabbi of all Russia, is foolish and will correct itself. Man is a religious being. His eternal fears and questionings soon bring him back to search for an explanation above reasoning powers.

By the way, if our powerful men really felt very badly about the religious matter, and would back up the clergy, Protestant, Catholic, Jewish and Mohammedan, ardently for relief from above, the persecution would soon stop. An industrial and financial boycott of Russia by five great powers would restore peace to the churches at once. But high finance thinks praying should suffice; it does not think so in any war that really interests it.

2 Die When East Braintree Staging Collapses

AMERICAN BARES GRAFT RING

Guy Wire at Huge Oil Tank Snaps and They Plunge Down 100 Feet

Two men were instantly killed today in East Braintree in a fall of nearly 100 feet, when a staging on a big oil tank which they were dismantling collapsed.

The dead:

Emil Kataja, 35, married, of 216 Granite st., Quincy.

Martin Allonen, 34, of 15 Wood ave., East Weymouth.

According to several witnesses, a guy wire on the ground on the outside of the tank snapped and let the steel staging swing from under the two iron workers.

Robert Gulage, 10 Ames st., Medford, was caught around the legs by the guy wire. He was lifted a few feet and severely shaken, but otherwise uninjured.

The men had been working for three weeks dismantling a Tides Service Refinery tank. They were employed by the Boston Bridge Building Co., and had been on the payroll for several years.

SCHOOL PUPILS PLAN STRIKE

Oak Bluffs, March 25—A general high school strike, legal action against the town authorities, and a special town meeting, promise to be the outgrowth of recent suspension of three school boys by Principal Bert Merrill after their refusal to saw wood and carry out ashes, meted out to them as punishment for being tardy.

The boys suspended last week, Horace Noyes, George Billing and George Frye, have enlisted the support of their schoolmates and the entire student body threatens not to return to school next Monday when their vacation is officially ended, unless their suspended friends are reinstated.

Declaring that the punishment ordered by Principal Merrill is ridiculous and unjust, Charles Frye, father of one of the suspended boys, threatened to take legal action against the town if his son was denied admittance to the school in good standing.

"If there is manual labor to be done in this town," declared Mr. Frye, "let it be given to the unemployed. It is a disgrace to the town that such punishment as sawing wood and carrying out ashes be imposed upon schoolboys. I will take legal action if no other way will suffice to keep my boy in school."

School board members are noncommital but it is believed they will support the action of Principal Merrill.

Townspeople, however, are not so sure the punishments were just and a special town meeting has been called for Wednesday night.

EITHER WET OR DRY, YOU WIN BY THIS PLAN

Boston Evening American to Give $500 Weekly for the Best Views on Subject

What do you think of prohibition?

For 10 years you've been voicing your opinion and so far as financial return is concerned, it hasn't been worth a cent.

Now you're going to be paid for it.

In a contest whose aim is to ascertain the real attitude of New England men and women on the dry law, the American has offered $500 in cash each week for the best letters of 200 words or less.

The contest, as has been prohibition itself, was a chief topic of discussion in New England today. For whether you're a bone dry, a trifle damp or in favor of full repeal, you are eligible to be paid for your opinion.

EXPRESS YOUR OPINION

There prizes of $100 each are offered weekly, one for the best letter setting forth reasons why the 18th Amendment and its enforcement should continue—one for the best letter giving reasons why the dry law should be abolished—one for the best stating reasons why it should be repealed.

Second, third and fourth prizes of $25, $15 and $10 are offered in each class and for the letter chosen weekly as the best of all three classes $50 additional will be paid.

There is probably not a man or woman in New England who hasn't a definite opinion regarding the effectiveness of prohibition and who hasn't stated that opinion at some time or other since the dry law went into effect. For that opinion the American is now ready to pay cash.

BIG POLITICAL ISSUE.

Why do you favor the present law?

Why do you favor modification? Why do you favor repeal?

Prohibition is stalking as a big issue of fall elections. In some cases it will be the paramount issue.

Your opinion will help clarify the situation, may sway somebody else to your cause, and you stand a chance of being paid good money for it.

The simple rules of the contest and a straw ballot on which you may vote if you wish are printed on Page 11 of this paper.

John F. Sullivan — Albert K. Sidlinger

Here is the Hotel Ritz on Columbus ave., South End, where the Garrett raiders were active. John F. Sullivan was the proprietor. Albert K. Sidlinger, former bail commissioner, now serving time, has said Sullivan told him he was being "bled" by Garrett.

SIDLINGER TELLS OF CRIME WORKINGS IN CHINATOWN, POLICE AND VICE

Vice and booze—grafting police—"bagmen" identified—"frame up"—"fixed" jury—and a man who "knew too much" railroaded to prison—

Albert K. Sidlinger has told his story.

The man who is to be Warner's star witness in the Garrett investigation has broken his silence of sorrow.

He has told it exclusively to the Boston Evening American. The first of it is printed today. Other installments will follow daily.

Sidlinger knows all the intimate details of the Ritz Hotel conspiracy case. He WAS the Ritz Hotel conspiracy case. That case is the keystone of the attorney-general's investigation of Oliver B. Garrett, the field glass through which the public eye is to be trained on police corruption and "the big men behind the bagmen" when the public hearings resume.

Sidlinger says he was railroaded by Garrett because he "knew too much."

He tells today of seeing the "fixing" of one man on the Ritz case jury.

He tells today of seeing the "fixer" report to an officer on duty in the courthouse.

He claims that the man who did the "fixing" was a Boston policeman, at one time a member of the flying squad.

They are a few highlights of today's instalment of his story. More sensational ones will follow.

He will paint a picture of a booze and vice ring existing under police protection.

He will tell of meetings of the "bagmen."

He will charge that John F. Sullivan said Garrett "bled" him for nearly $30,000.

He will tell of alleged payments to other police, of the protection given by the "big men" powerful enough to fix juries and turn the law from justice.

He will tell the "inside" of certain police raids in Chinatown.

Money was behind it all. Dirty money, protection money, graft money, blood money, he charges.

The man who tells it, the man who will rock the city with his charges when he is called to testify before the attorney-general, is a broken-hearted shadow of his former self.

Once a bail commissioner, well known in state and federal courts, now a number at Deer Island—a man whose hair turned gray overnight when the prison guards told him his wife had died on Christmas eve, leaving their four-year-old son alone in the world.

It is a story that—if true—shows graft to have ruled Boston for years. Start it now.

Sidlinger's Own Story

By ALBERT K. SIDLINGER

The story of my trial for conspiracy to extort money from the owner of the Hotel Ritz and the information which I have in connection with the Garrett investigation is given freely without any personal hope for reward.

I am not looking for any mercy or compassion. I have suffered more than I could believe any man could suffer. My friends and all who know me will, no doubt, admit that I can take my punishment like a man, even though I am the innocent victim of a ring, which is bound to protect the big fellows.

I was framed in the Ritz case to cover Garrett. Somebody had to take the rap and, unfortunately for me, I was one of the goats.

The other man is Nicholas Cockinos, whom I believe is just as innocent of any connection with the hold-up of the Ritz Hotel as I am. Before I met John F. Sullivan, owner of the Ritz Hotel, I was practicing as a bail commissioner in the courts of Massachusetts. I had graduated from the Suffolk Law School and was working to pass the bar examinations.

I had no criminal record—had never been accused of anything wrong and was living happily with my wife and little son.

I was well known to judges and prosecuting officers of the State and Federal courts, and I had the reputation of never accepting a dishonest dollar in my life.

The world looked rosy to me. My wife was my pal, and it seemed to me that I had found complete happiness when our son was born. I worked hard to give them every comfort and I was on the level with everybody I dealt with. I'll defy any man

STOCKS LIFTED TO NEW HIGHS

New York, March 25 (AP)—More than 100 issues were lifted to new high levels for 1930 on the New York Stock Exchange today, as passage of the tariff bill by the Senate and reports of increasing steel mill operations prompted a wild bull demonstration. Trading was in such volume that the ticket was 45 minutes late.

Some gains were reduced as traders hastened to take profits. Indications of spring acceleration of steel mill activity was particularly cheering.

Peoples Gas, Vanadium Steel, American Can, Air Reduction, Colorado Fuel, Eastman Kodak, Union Carbide, A. M. Byers, Houston Oil, Standard of N. J., Foster Wheeler, General Railway Signal and Ward Baking preferred sold up $3 to 8.

U. S. Steel, American Telephone, American Bank Note and Columbian Carbon reached new high ground for the year in lesser gains.

LETTER GIVES WARNER NEW LEADS IN GARRETT PROBE

to come forward and say that I lie.

I can date my misfortune to the day I met John F. Sullivan, owner of the Ritz Hotel. It was on Friday the 13th of April, 1928. Maybe the date should have made me wary, but I never thought of that.

On the morning of that day I happened to drop into Jimmie Hatton's office. He was a lawyer whom I had known through my work in Suffolk Court and often times I had acted as bail commissioner for his clients.

In his office that day sat an elderly man who Hatton introduced as John F. Sullivan.

Jimmie said to me: "Al, I am a bit hazy whether the government will institute padlock proceedings on a State court conviction." Then he pointed to Sullivan and said: "Here's a man who's been bled to death by crooked cops."

And Sullivan said: "That's a fact. I'm an old man and I'm crippled and the cops are bleeding me for every cent I've got."

We talked for a while, and before I left I told Jimmie I would look up the matter for him.

I forgot about it for a couple of days. Then one night I got a call from Jimmie's wife. She said he was in bad shape, and told me I was the only one she felt like calling on for help.

I left my house in the West End and went over to Hatton's house. I found Jimmie pretty low with a bad case of pneumonia. Four of his children sick with whooping cough.

I tried to locate Dr. H. Allen Novak by telephone, and about 1:40 a. m. I succeeded in reaching him at Brookline. I told him about Jimmie, and then he talked with Jimmie's wife.

Tells of Hotel Man's Anxiety to Meet Him

In the interim there was a bedlam of calls on the phone from persons inquiring for Jimmie. I answered one of them and a man with a thick voice inquired for Jimmie.

I told him he was sick—too sick to talk. I thought the voice was that of a man very drunk.

About 2 a. m. that morning another voice over the phone asked me if Jimmie could talk to him. I said, "He's dying. He can't talk to anyone."

The voice asked, "Well, who is this talking?" I said, "This is Sidlinger. And the voice replied, "Oh, yes! You are the young man I met in Jimmie's office. I am John F. Sullivan of the Ritz Hotel."

I recalled meeting him and then he asked me if I could see him. I told him I was going to my house in the West End to get some rubbing alcohol for Jimmie because the drug stores were closed.

I said I would be glad to drop in at the Ritz and talk with him. He said, "Oh, no, I'll see you somewhere on the way in."

So I told him the route I would take, and he arranged to meet me at the corner of Massachusett. ave. and Albany st.

I drove in and, when I reached the corner, I saw him standing beneath an arc light and there was a car parked nearby. I walked over and said, "Good morning."

He replied to the greeting, and then he said, "Where's the other fellow?"

I said, "What other fellow?"

And he said, "The Greek, where is he?"

I said, "What Greek?" and he replied, "Cockinos."

I said, "There's nobody with me. I'm alone."

"Well," he said, "what about my case?"

I said, "There's no time to talk about that, Jimmie is pretty far gone, and I'm going down to my house for some rubbing alcohol. It will help to make him comfortable."

And I offered to drive him to his house in my car. He walked over and looked inside the car and then he said, "All right, let's go."

(During the Ritz conspiracy trial it was testified that Special Officer Arthur Tiernan and other police officers were sitting in a police car at a distance from the Sidlinger car observing the meeting between Sullivan and Sidlinger.)

Well, we drove along and Sullivan kept talking about his case, and he was pretty nervous. I was only interested in Jimmie and wondering if he'd pull through the crisis. I told Sullivan all about it, and I told him Jimmie's kids would be up against it if their father passed out.

We finally arrived at Sullivan's house on Newbury st. in the Back Bay. He got out, and I drove to my house, got the alcohol and went to Jimmie's and stayed there till 7:30 the next morning, and then I went back to my home for breakfast.

Later on I went to Jimmie's office and told the girl there to look out for things because Jimmie wouldn't be in that morning. I remember I thought then that he would never come back to his office. And he never did.

On the way down in the elevator that day I felt a touch on my arm and I looked around and there was Sullivan. He said, "I'm going to see if I can get my case continued."

I said to him, "Well, leave it to Cochinos. He can do it."

Then Sullivan said, "Well I've been cheated and double-crossed by so many lawyers that I'm going to find out about this one."

Refuses to Discuss Case With Sullivan

Sullivan left me there and the next thing I remember about the affair was when I read in a newspaper about an extortion ring operating in Boston and that indictments would follow.

And out of the clear sky I was indicted with others. I was before Judge Fosdick and pleaded not guilty to all the charges returned against me.

Six months afterwards — on Dec 26, Sullivan came to my home and asked to see me. I refused to talk to him or see him but he came back the next day and the next and again on the 28th.

On the 28th, I had called William J. Patron, my attorney, for his advice on seeing Sullivan, and Patron said, "Go ahead and se him, but have a witness with you when you talk to him."

I sent word to Sullivan that I would see him at 7:30 that night. He came to my house accompanied by a woman, whom he introduced as his wife.

I talked with Sullivan from 8:30 that night until 12:15. The substance of our talk I have related to the attorney-general. Is it reasonable to suppose that a man from whom I was accused of extorting money would talk to me in a friendly manner for that length of time?

I also had a witness at that meeting. He was James F. Regan and he can repeat everything that was said at that meeting.

Because of my experience in the courts of this State, I thought I knew everything there was to be known about a trial, and I went right into it with the firm conviction that I would prove all the charges against me to be without foundation in fact.

I was innocent. I felt that I could face anyone no matter who he was or what ring he represented and beat him.

I was sure I would show the world that those who accused me were rotten to the core and merely cogs in the big machine to grind the ordinary citizen into the mud when he raises his voice.

I had seen a lot of peculiar dealings in the corridors of courtrooms of this State, but I felt that I was able to cope with the bagmen and jury-fixers and lick them.

So I wasn't afraid. But I realized for the first time what the ordinary man brought to trial had to contend with if the gang was after him and wanted to get him out of the way.

So I was on my guard, and I was in court bright and early when the case opened, and the late Judge Quinn sat on the bench.

The selection of jurors began. My counsel, Atty. Patron sat with me, and I looked across the room and noted that a man, then unknown to me, was seated next to one of the prospective jurors, and talking to him.

The man was chosen as Number (—) juror. His name is —— — of (—) st., and he is the juror that was reached.

After the jury was impaneled I followed the man who had been talking to (—), out into the corridor. He went into the outer office of the district attorney's suite and I trailed along, hoping to find out who he was.

There was a special officer in the waiting room outside the district attorney's office.

He was approached by the man I was following and I saw him grabbed by the arm. The man who had talked to the juror shouted, "Well, we're all set. —— —— is No. —— juror and he'll hang these Watch and Ward ——— ——."

I made inquiries and learned that the man who made that remark is ——— ——, an officer at one time attached to the flying squadron at police headquarters.

The next day I waited outside the courtroom and when Asst. Dist. Atty. —— appeared I said to him, "Look here, I am at least entitled to a fair trial here and I want to inform you that this jury has been reached."

He replied, "I know nothing about it."

Then I saw officer —— approaching and I pointed to him and said to Asst. Dist —— "There is the man who bagged this case."

Regrets He Did Not Ask Court for a 'Mistrial'

—— said nothing. —— made no denial. But they both went to the district attorney's office. When they reached the outer office —— turned to —— and said, "Sit tight, ——."

When my counsel came in I told him of the incident and I also told other attorneys representing defendants in the case. They were Rosenberg, O'Brien and Tierney, in addition to George Douglass.

I asked my own lawyer to call for a mistrial immediately, but through the persuasion of —— and —— they agreed that it was not then advisable to do so.

They said to me, "Listen, Sidlinger, there's nothing to this case. If a directed verdict is not ordered by the court, the jury will come out after deliberating 10 minutes and return a verdict of not guilty."

Fool that I was, I agreed to let the thing rest. But I went into the court and pointed out to the various counsel the man, who sat in the jury box. His face turned red as a beet when they looked him over.

From information of one those identity I cannot now disclose, I learned that the police officer — called—the juryman, that night from Boston police headquarters said to him, "Sidlinger was wise to that job. He had a pretty close shave."

The following morning I chased into the district attorney's office and, in the presence of Asst. Dist-Atty. Doyle, I said to him, "If you tamper any more with my jury I will toss you bodily out of this window."

I then turned to —— and told him that —— had said that he, ——, had told —— that Dist.-Atty. Foley said: "This case must be won by the government at any cost," —— did not deny it. ——, the assistant district attorney, immediately got hold of Sergt. John Manning of Station 3, whom I had talked with after this episode, and asked Manning what I had said.

Manning replied: "I don't want to get mixed up in this dirty mess. Sidlinger said nothing to me."

The case went to the jury at 9:40 a. m. on March 3, and stayed out until 6:40 p. m. I have learned that during that time nine of the jurors stood for acquittal.

They returned the verdict of guilty, however, and I was sentenced to two years and fined $500 for misdemeanor—a sentence practically unparalleled in Massachusetts courts. And the reason for it was that I knew too much about the ring and the way it worked. They wanted me out of the way to protect Garrett and his gang and the bosses who directed his operations.

And they succeeded. I've been here over a year and not a soul has visited me. I'm just one of the great list of martyrs who have been sacrificed so the gang may reap their profits undisturbed.

The next installment will tell of Sidlinger's knowledge of the inner workings of the Ritz Hotel. The gang collector, names of Chinamen who will be called as witnesses, and other details of the Garret reign. Also the story of Cockinos, who will testify about graft collections from keepers of disreputable places, and actual payments made to certain parties.

RITZ EVIDENCE BOMBSHELL TO PROBE

Evidence Barred at Hotel Owner's Trial Expected to Boom Warner Inquiry

A phase of the Garrett investigation which promises startling developments is the Ritz Hotel case, since evidence barred at the trial, by the late Judge Quinn, may be admitted in the Warner inquiry.

The Ritz Hotel, on Columbus ave., South End, was raided in March, 1926, by Garrett and five members of the Boston police liquor squad. Five waiters were arrested on charges of violating the prohibition laws. Found guilty in the lower court, they appealed.

The evidence leading to the raid had been furnished by Raymond L. Perry and Nicholas Cockinos, Watch and Ward Society investigators.

The hotel proprietor, John F. Sullivan, was held on a charge of maintaining a nuisance. He was acquitted in the lower court, however. On appeal, the five Ritz waiters were cleared in the Superior Court.

FOLEY PROBES ARRESTS

Meanwhile, Dist.-Atty. William J. Foley had investigated what he considered suspicious circumstances surrounding the arrests. Evidence he had gathered was laid later before a Suffolk County grand jury.

Five men were indicted, the charges being conspiracy to steal from the Ritz proprietor, conspiracy to obstruct justice in two counts and an attempt to bribe a police officer—Garrett.

Those indicted were Cockinos, Albert K. Sidlinger, formerly a professional bondsman; John F. Mullen, known as "the key broker"; Ralph Gross of Lowell, and a Boston lawyer, then living in Dorchester, but who died before the case was called for trial.

Mullen, who pleaded guilty on all counts, was serving a prison term for larceny when the trial began. The jury found Gross not guilty. Cockinos and Sidlinger were convicted of conspiracy to steal and to obstruct justice, on one count. The other count was not pressed.

DIRECTED VERDICT

Judge Quinn directed that a verdict of not guilty be returned on the charge of attempting to bribe Garrett. Cockinos and Sidlinger were given two years each and fined $500 for conspiracy to steal. The other charges was filed.

Sidlinger also declared Sullivan had told him of Garrett's property holdings in Newton at that time. The defendant then went on to say he had been framed by Garrett and the other police raiders.

Several months after his indictment, Sidlinger said, Sullivan called to see him at his home. He refused then to see him but, on advice of counsel, did so the following day.

"Sullivan said to me," Sidlinger related, "a lot of your friends are my friends, and they tell me you are a pretty good fellow. They blame me at the United States Court for Garrett's (Sullivan's) death and they blame me for all your sickness and trouble, too.

"I want to try to make things right. I want you to go to your friends, who are my friends, and tell them right. I don't want to go to them in person.'

"I said to Sullivan, 'If you will go to the grand jury and tell the truth and clear my name, I will go to these friends of yours, who are my friends, and tell them anything that will help you.' Then I asked him, 'Why did you bring me into this thing?'

GARRETT DEMANDS $500

"He replied, I was told by Arthur Timmons, a police officer, that you were a secret member of the Watch and Ward Society.

"I said, 'I don't belong to the Watch and Ward Society, and they have no connection with me whatsoever,' I asked him, 'What was the idea of bringing me down to Almont, st. that morning.

"He said, 'I was told to do it by the police.'

"I said, 'What police?'

"He said, 'Sergt. Timmons and Special Officer Tiernan.'

To the following question, Sidlinger cried: "I am the victim of a wicked conspiracy on the part of officers Timmons, Tiernan and Garrett!" He then continued:

"I said, 'How did this thing happen? How did the whole thing start?' Sullivan told me that on the 14th of April, Officer Tiernan came into the hotel and demanded $500.

"Sullivan told me that he said to Garrett: 'I will give you no $500. I have a former United States district attorney and a former assistant district attorney of Suffolk County to look after me now and he is going to stop this.'

"Sullivan said that Garrett said: 'I'll show you how good your district attorney is. I am going to raid this place now.'

NOTES INTRODUCED

"Sullivan told me that there were $3500 worth of liquor on the fifth floor of the hotel and that he thought Garrett knew about it.

"He told me that he had given Garrett $2000 at seven different times previous to this day, making a total of $14,000. He said that Garrett owned property in Middlesex County, Plymouth County and in Norfolk County that was bought with the money he gave him.

"Sullivan said he gave Officer Tiernan $50 a week while he was patroling a beat and paid him $25 a week after he was made a special officer."

There were introduced in evidence stenographic notes alleged to have been made by Police Stenographer Augustus Gill in the Ritz Hotel overhearing a conversation between Sullivan and the four defendants. Quotations from these notes follow:

Mullen—You will never get another rap in this place if you do what you are told.

Sullivan—Were you with Garrett last night?

Mullen—I told you something and I won't tell you any more.

Mullen—Yes.

Sullivan—I thought Garrett would not take any money. I thought he was on the level.

Mullen—I'll say that's the only thing Garrett's sore about. He ain't getting enough.

Garrett, a witness at the trial, denied that he had ever taken or solicited money for protection of the hotel.

Bank Teller 63 Years

New York, March 25 (AP)—In his 83d year Mahlon B. Smith continues to be an active bank teller, as he has been for 63 years without missing a day.

Public Says "Get 'Em"

THE measure of any activity is public opinion—and public opinion has overwhelmingly endorsed the move of the Boston Evening American in offering a reward of $5000 for the key to the graft and corruption system in Boston.

Not since the famous extortion cases nearly a decade ago has Boston been so shaken by revelations of misused power, of indicated criminality in high places, of organized, protected lawbreaking for gain.

While the Boston Evening American places the finger of guilt on no one, sufficient has been disclosed in the so-called Garrett investigation—and more has been intimated—to make it plain that scandal has reared its head for a substantial cause.

To obtain the key to that secret, to secure information upon which indictments and convictions may be obtained against the parties responsible for the graft and corruption that have undermined Boston's official circles and have cast suspicion on all police, the Boston Evening American has offered its $5000 reward.

And public opinion instantly responded to the offer, taking the stand with this newspaper that the REAL story has not yet been told and may not be told unless some informed person or persons come forward in response to the reward offar.

"If Boston is to be prevented from getting a taste of Chicago terrorism, it is just such work as the Evening American is doing that will prevent it," was one comment, made by Representative Roland D. Sawyer of Ware.

We want no Chicagoism in the Hub. Public opinion does not want it. A good job of cleaning up has started, but a few sturdy brooms of information will help out immensely. The Boston Evening American stands ready to pay out $5000 for this information, EXCLUSIVELY.

Somebody Knows! It is in the public interest to tell.

American's $5000 Reward Would Put the Thumb of Law on These Men:

GROUP whose collections must have made Garrett's $122,000 look like pin money.

RING of higher-ups who are the real powers in the graft system.

LAWYERS who are represented as furnishing protection for vice and corruption.

TIP OFF MEN who knew of raids in advance and warned proprietors of resorts paying for protection.

POLITICIANS who have been able to prevent prosecution of guilty officials and exposes of grafting.

FIXERS who have been able to so manipulate juries as to keep favored ones out of jail.

FINALLY, the men who are the real powers behind the scenes—the key men to the whole situation.

Sidlinger Hoped to Foil 'Bagmen, Jury Fixers'

"I realized for the first time what the ordinary man brought to trial had to contend with if the gang was after him and wanted to get him out of the way," writes Albert K. Sidlinger, former bail commissioner, today in his story of the Ritz case.

"I had seen a lot of peculiar dealings in the corridors of courtrooms of this State, but I felt that I was able to cope with the bagmen and jury fixers and lick them."

Former Hub Lawyer Dead in Montreal

News was received today of the death in Montreal of William Beirnas de Las Casas, former well-known Malden and Boston lawyer and former chairman of the Metropolitan Park Commission.

In earlier years he was active in the First Corps of Cadets, a trustee of Malden hospital and member of the Union and University clubs of Boston.

HAUNTED BY 'WITCHES' IN HER CELL

State Demands That Lila Jimerson Go to Chair as Arch-Conspirator in Murder

Buffalo, N. Y., March 25 (INS)—Nancy Bowen, a superstitious 66-year-old squaw, was to take the stand today at the trial of Miss Lila Jimerson, Indian spinster charged with first degree murder, and tell how she, at the instigation of Lila, hammered Mrs. Clothilde Marchand to death on the afternoon of March 6.

Nancy Bowen spent an uncomfortable night in her cell. She begged the matrons to rid her of the witches that were casting an evil spell over her and giving her pains in the chest. Nancy is said to have reached the frame of mind where she believes she was fooled when she was told that Mrs. Marchand was the "witch" who was "hexing" her and now believes it was some other "witch."

Dist. Atty. Moore was to make the opening statement to the jury this morning. He is expected to demand that Lila be sent to the electric chair as the arch conspirator in the murder of Mrs. Marchand.

LILA MAY NOT TESTIFY

The plans of the defense are shrouded in mystery. There have been hints of "surprise" moves. International News Service was informed on good authority that one of these moves may be a decision to keep Lila off the witness stand.

Lila was in love with Mrs. Marchand's husband, Henri Marchand, noted artist and sculptor. She is alleged by the State to have imagined in the mind of Nancy the idea that Mrs. Marchand was a "witch" and should be done away with.

She is accused of having told Nancy Mrs. Marchand was responsible for the death of her husband, "Kenaqtras Charlie" Bowen, and that the only way to break the evil spell the "white witch" was casting over the Indians was to kill her.

The two Indian women came to Buffalo from the Cattaraugus reservation, 40 miles away, on March 6 last, bought a hammer in a department store and Mrs. Bowen, according to her signed confession went into the Marchand home and murdered the artist's wife.

RODE WITH MARCHAND

A short time afterward Lila telephoned Marchand at the Buffalo Museum of Natural Sciences, where he was at work, and he took the automobile riding, later driving her to the bus station. Marchand, who is declared to be a material witness denies he had any knowledge of a plot to kill his wife.

The U. S. Government today formally entered the trial, when Richard H. Templeton, U. S. Attorney for western New York, appeared in court and was accepted as a co-counsel for the defense. He informed Judge F. Bret Thorn that he had received instructions from the Attorney-General of the United States to take part in the trial.

U. S. Atty. Templeton asked court to adjourn the trial so he could familiarize himself with the case and Judge Thorn granted an adjournment until 2 o'clock this afternoon.

HOUSE O. K.'S ARMY COST

Washington, March 25 (AP)—In line with the Young plan of settlement, the House ways and means committee today approved a bill under which the United States would receive $273,000,000 from Germany to cover the cost of the American Army of Occupation.

Payment of the amount has been approved by the German Reichstag, Chairman Hawley of the committee said. Notes relating to it have been exchanged between the two countries.

The original bill presented by this country to Germany called for payment of about $292,000,000, but this total was scaled down in proportion to the reductions made by other nations in their claims against Germany under the Young plan.

10 Marooned in Ice Are Rescued

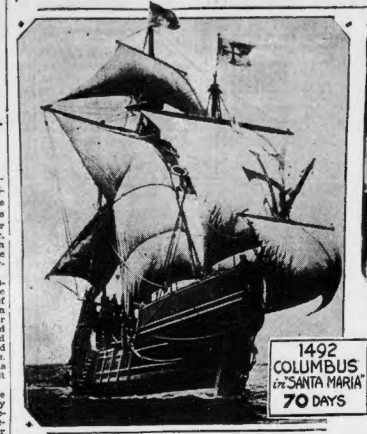
Leland, Mich., March 25 (AP)—Two small boats containing 10 men, caught in the ice between South Manitou Island and the mainland since yesterday morning, were liberated by the car ferry Wabash of the Ann Arbor Railroad this forenoon. The vessel, a mail boat and a coast guard craft, immediately headed for the coast guard station on the island.

Greeks to Observe Freedom Centenary

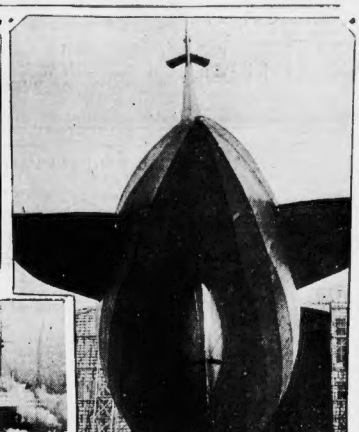
Greeks from all over Greater Boston will gather in Faneuil Hall at 7:20 o'clock tonight to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the freedom of Greece from Turkish rule.

The meeting, sponsored by the Hellenic Association of Boston, will be attended, it is expected, by more than 5000 persons.

Bremen's 'Baby Sister' Beat Her Time Across and Battled Wind to Do It



What would Signor Christobo Colombo think about a ship that could cross the Atlantic in 4 days, 17 hours and 6 minutes? Chances are he wouldn't believe it, and he'd say: "Well, I sailed an uncharted course, remember."



Of course, Lindy's "Spirit of St. Louis" beat 'em all, but when it comes to boats—well, the Europa's time, 36 minutes faster than her older sister's mark, when the Bremen set the record, will doubtless live until she herself smashes it, which may be on her next trip over.

Dr. Eckner's Graf Zeppelin sailed through the air from Lakehurst, N. J., to Germany in an epoch-making west-to-east trip, setting a speed mark for craft of her type.

CALL CANADA PLAN FAILURE

Washington, March 25 (INS)—Directors of the forces defending prohibition before the House judiciary committee decided today to launch an attack on the Canadian governmental dispensary system when hearings are resumed tomorrow.

E. C. Drury, former prime minister of the Province of Ontario, will appear as the first witness for the drys. He is expected to declare the Canadian system has failed to check bootlegging and to advise against the adoption of the system in this country.

The dry forces will go to the hearing tomorrow prepared to close their case in one day if necessary, although they will ask for more time.

John J. Lenz, ex-congressman and president of the American Insurance Union, of Columbus, O., also is slated to be a witness.

The "aces" of the nation's dry organizations, including Supt. F. Scott McBride, Anti-Saloon League; Dr. Clarence True Wilson, Methodist board of prohibition temperance and public morals, and Dr. E. C. Dinwiddie, legislative agent of the darys, are also slated to appear.

GENERAL HELD IN SOVIET JAIL

Paris, March 25 (AP)—Gen. Alexander Paul Koutipoff, missing czarist leader, was said today in La Liberte, Paris afternoon newspaper, to have been alive and in prison in Moscow as late as seven days ago.

According to the newspaper, Gen. Koutipoff, who was chief of the Russian Royalists throughout Europe at the time of his disappearance last January, was kidnaped by Russian agents and forcibly carried aboard a Russian steamer off the coast of Normandy on Jan. 26.

The paper professed to give the exact spot of the embarkation on a map, and declared: "We have awaited the moment when the secret service has received offical confirmation of the above facts in order to make them public. We now can affirm that Gen. Koutipoff six days ago was alive in the Loubiankaia jail in Moscow."

An editorial in the paper called on Premier Tardieu to take necessary steps to "punish the guilty."

Gen. Koutipoff's disappearance last January, as he walked from his home to the nearby Russian Officers' club, excited considerable feeling in France, where it was charged the Soviet government had arranged his abduction. Feeling ran high for several weeks, during which a small army of detectives sought to unravel the mystery.

Soviet officials in Paris claimed the charges made against them by the royalists were merely attempts to discredit their government.

Civic Leaders Laud $5000 Reward Offer

Hearty endorsement from leaders in all walks of life—enthusiastic praise from "the man in the street" — was the response with which Boston greeted the offer of a $5000 reward by the Boston Evening American for information leading to conviction for graft and corruption.

Officials, civic leaders and business men today added unstinted commendation to the words of previous endorsers who included Atty.-Gen. Warner, his assistant, George B. Lourie, and Special Asst. Atty.-Gen. Damon E. Hall—directors of the Garrett probe.

Like thousands of citizens, these spokesmen for the rank and file realize that Boston needs a clean sweep and that the offer of this reward of $5000 means that eventually answers will be had to these questions which are on the lips of everybody:

Where did Garrett get the $122,000?

Who else in positions of trust banked thousands within a few years?

Where did they get theirs?

"This is a great public service."

"The Boston American is again demonstrating its willingness to tackle any situation that obstructs the people's rights."

"The Boston American is doing a great service not only to Boston but to all New England."

Following are some comments in full:

GEORGE MELHADO, president Roxbury Board of Trade—It is a big thing to do, and the Boston American certainly is to be commended for doing it. Offering of this reward should bring out information that should result in developments of great value to the investigation and to the community at large.

REV. GARFIELD MORGAN, pastor Central Congregational Church, Lynn—I think it is a commendable thing for the American to offer this reward. From what I have read the ring in Boston is very powerful. It is a great public service for the Boston American to do this. I do not always agree with the American, but in this instance certainly the paper is to be commended.

MAYOR J. FRED MANNING of Lynn — The Boston Evening American has performed a very meritorious action in offering a reward of $5000 for evidence of felonies growing out of the so-called Garrett case.

If it was not for the persistent efforts of the newspapers, I do not believe the investigation would have attained the heights it has.

The Boston Evening American is indeed doing a great service, not only to Boston but to New England, when it exposes such goings-on as we are hearing every day of this investigation.

J. T. SILVA, Green st., Cambridge, Businessman—Little men rattling around in big places, and a bunch of swaggering bullies engaged in shady practices, ought to be exposed and punished, and the initiative of the Boston Evening American in offering a reward of $5000 for information to bring that about is a step in the right direction.

MAYOR ANDREW A. CASASSA of Revere—The Boston Evening on its offer of a reward. The stand it thus takes to help the authorities clean up vice and crime conditions throughout the state is most praiseworthy.

BENJAMIN ROSEMAN, president Inman Sq. Business Men's Association, Cambridge—All honor to the Boston Evening American for offering a reward of $5000 in this case. It shows a progressive spirit. The Boston Evening American is again demonstrating its willingness to tackle any situation which obstructs the people's rights.

It shows once more that William Randolph Hearst through the Boston Evening American is one of his chain of newspapers, which has done so much for the good of the country, is on the job ready and willing to do anything that will render order out of chaos in Boston.

The quicker this case is exposed the better it will be for the safety and security of the people of Boston.

RUSSELL A. WOOD, school committee, Cambridge—I think the spirit in back of the Boston Evening American offer is splendid No doubt it will bring much evidence to light.

MRS. CHARLES McPHEE, Inman st., Cambridge, prominent clubwoman—Conditions in Boston are deplorable, and I heartily endorse the American's plan to bring them out into the light.

REV. WILLIAM B. GOBLE, pastor, First Baptist Church, Cambridge—I heartily approve of the Boston American's action in offering a reward for evidence of felonies. If there is a ring and a vice gang in Boston the citizens ought to know about it. I am in sympathy with a thorough investigation and going over of conditions in Boston, but care should be taken that innocent persons are not mentioned.

J. HARRY PENNIMAN, secretary Cambridge Election Commission—The Boston American is to be congratulated in offering a reward of $5000 I am sure it will bring good results.

REV. DR. A. Z. CONRAD, Pastor, Park St. Church, Boston—I commend this action of the Boston American as a sincere effort to assist in correcting a situation which everybody with common sense knows to be intolerable.

I wish that the American would go farther and undertake a clearing up of half dozen of the popular clubs where booze is as plentiful as water, if reports are true

CARL I. RODMAN, 16 Central sq., Cambridge—The reward of $5000 will, I am sure, be the means of bringing forward valuable information which will be an asset to the investigating officers. I am glad to see the American taking the lead, as it always does, in the interests of the people. I say Good Luck to the Boston American. Long may it continue with the slogan: Vox Populi, Vox Dei

REV. DR. B. A. WILLMOTT, formerly pastor of Eliot Congregational Church, Roxbury—It is a fine move to uncover one of the most dangerous conditions which threaten to involve us as a city in methods of deceit and underhandedness that will stain the fair name of Boston.

The Boston American has come into the inquiry at the nick of time, and richly deserves praise for its influence in this important ...

LORD DERBY AND BORAH TO MEET

London, March 25 (AP)—The Earl of Derby, noted British sportsman, who plans to visit the United States in April to attend the Kentucky Derby as the guest of Joseph E. Widener, may possibly meet Sen. Borah, whom he once invited to visit England.

Lord Derby engaged in a rhetorical brush with Sen. Borah in 1927.

"There is one prominent politician," said Lord Derby, "who always seems to think we are ogres. I refer to Sen. Borah. I invite him to come to this country, if he will do me the honor, and stay as long as he likes."

Senator Borah denied he ever thought or said the English were ogres. "I would really like to visit England and I hope I may," he was quoted as saying. "My mission will not be that of hunting wild game such as ogres, but to know better a people whose highest encomium is that of always having been loyal to their own class, an attitude which prevails rather strongly in the United States and which, I think, is worth preserving.

ITALY MOVES TO RECESS PARLEY

Washington, March 25 (AP)—Despite optimistic views held in some governmental circles over the work of the London naval conference, Chairman Britten of the House naval committee said in a statement today that the American delegation should be withdrawn and the conference adjourned, as the United States could proceed with its warship construction program.

London, March 25 (AP)—Adjournment of the naval conference for six months as a means of escaping the present impasse was being definitely considered at the conference today.

The suggestion for such adjournment was attributed to Foreign Minister Grandi of Italy and was made to Prime Minister MacDonald.

The idea was that this suspension would give France and Italy a further support ably of composing their difficulties without prolonging the present virtual suspension of the conference.

Adjournment would contemplate reassembling of the conference on October 1, thus giving an opportunity for a possible agreement before Christmas.

This suggestion is now under advisement, but it was said in authoritative conference circles that it would not be made effective until all hopes vanished for a five-power agreement at this time.

Whether some sort of a pact would be signed prior to an adjournment was a matter of speculation The heads of the five delegations planned to meet late today to consider the whole situation, including the adjournment suggestion.

During the day assurance that the French delegation was ready to proceed with a view to achieving a five-power pact was given the Americans by the French at a conference at American headquarters.

France Still Hopes for Naval Accord, Says Briand

Paris, March 25 (AP)—Foreign Minister Briand told the Senate today the way was still open for a naval reduction agreement.

"I have not been able so far to obtain what I wish for France," he said during discussion of the foreign affairs budget, "but the conversations have not closed. I have not given up hope of seeing the problem again taken up with the possibility of a solution."

EUROPA IN NEW SPEED RECORD FROM BREMEN

Reaches New York in 4 Days, 17 Hrs., 6 Mins., Beating Time of Sister Ship

New York, March 25 (AP)—A new speed queen of the seas was enthroned today when the North German Lloyd liner Europa on her maiden voyage wrested the crown from her sister ship, the Bremen.

The 51,000-ton racing greyhound passed Ambrose lightship, the crossing tape, at 5:54 a. m. today, making the 3100-mile crossing from Cherbourg, France, in 4 days 17 hours and 6 minutes.

She bettered by 18 minutes the record established last October by the Bremen, which on that occasion bettered by 18 minutes the time of her maiden voyage last July when she dethroned the long-reigning Cunard liner Mauretania.

The voyage of the Europa was made under more difficult weather conditions than those faced by the Bremen on her record-breaking run. Throughout the voyage she battled strong head winds and heavy seas.

The liner left Cherbourg, France, at 12:30 p. m., eastern standard time, last Thursday.

A heavy fog settled over the lower bay just before the Europa drove past Ambrose Lightship, where she immediately slowed down and crept through the barbor to quarantine.

There the German ambassador, Baron F. W. vonPrittwitz und Graffon; Dr. Karl vonLewinski, German consul-general, and North German Lloyd officials boarded the liner.

There was little greeting from harbor craft as the Europa felt her way through the fog, partly due to the fact that few vessels could sight or identify her, until almost alongside.

Passengers aboard the ship said that the last day's run must have been made at a faster clip than those before as the big ship shook from stem to stern.

Europa's Arrival Is Broadcast by WEEI

The arrival of the Europa in New York harbor was broadcast direct from the boat as it lay off quarantine this afternoon. The words of the Captain, Admiral Edward Thorgeson of Commodore Nicholas Johnsen, commander of the vessel, and the German consul-general at New York, were brought to the ears of Greater Boston listeners through Station WEEI.

New Englanders on Europa's Record Trip

A Framingham family of five, together with other New Englanders were among passengers on the speedy Europa.

Carlo Bianchi, Framingham contractor, was one of those landed at New York, completing the special trip with Mrs. Bianchi, the Misses Adele and Guisippini Bianchi and Fermo A. Bianchi.

Among other New England passengers were Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Bailey, Brookline; Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Perkins, Wakefield, and Ephraim Saunders of Portland.

Federation of Labor Fights Judge Parker

Washington, March 25 (INS)—The American Federation of Labor announced today it would oppose the nomination of Judge John J. Parker of North Carolina, named by President Hoover as associate justice of the Supreme Court, because Parker upheld the injunction issued by United States Judge McClintic against the United Mine Workers in West Virginia.

The injunction prevents union men from approaching non-union men in West Virginia and soliciting them to join the union or to call a strike.

By GEORGE HAMBLIN

With its first year drawing to a close, the aeronautical course at Rindge Technical School, Cambridge, holds the unique honor of having 47 students enrolled. Plans are being laid for a larger class in the coming year.

John W. Wood, headmaster, with his ear to the ground, decided a course should be started that would give the boys a chance to learn the elementary part of airplanes, their construction and care. Hence, with funds from the Cambridge School Committee, Charles L. O'Connor, former wartime army flyer, was engaged as instructor and the course announced as part of the school year.

The Navy Department supplied an NB-1, a surveyed type plane, also two Liberty motors. The course consists of two classes daily.

Aside from the air class, an aero club is in operation, with O'Connor as advisor. Both groups are engaged in building a Northrup glider in the wood working department of the school, under direction of Saville Moore.

Oil 'Alky' Tested in 'Jaky' Plague Probe

Oklahoma City, March 25 (AP)—Tests to ascertain if alcohol derived from petroleum caused a paralysis-like malady suffered by scores of persons here were being made by order of James Folen, assistant state health commissioner.

Folen said the alcohol might have been used in making Jamaica ginger, which many victims admit drinking.

Dr. Robert Isham, chemist, credited with discovering the process for making petroleum, or iso-propyl alcohol, said it could be drunk, but would not cause intoxication or paralysis.

A PARTNER'S OBLIGATIONS

EACH partner owes to his associates the assurance that business can be continued indefinitely, unhampered by lack of working capital or credit. The death of either is a contingency that would bring up this question. At the same time, he owes it to his dependents that, in case of his death, their interest in the business can be liquidated, as required by law, without bother or loss.

Unless the business has a large fund of ready money at that time, these dual obligations conflict. May we tell you how Business Life Insurance can be used in such cases for the benefit of all concerned? Send for our booklet, "Business Life Insurance for Executives," addressing—

Strange Bone Leads Janitor Into Field of Anthropology

Orono, Me., March 25—There will be no rush of anthropologists or other heavy thinking excavators to St. Albans as a result of the discovery of a large and strange bone near St. Albans.

University of Maine biological experts say it is whale, and a drill-hole shows that it had probably been mounted at one time.

The professors cannot account for it being found in a pasture some distance from any house, but the janitor has a theory. "The folks got tired of seeing the thing around and threw it away," he says.

U N EMPLOYED TO BE LISTED

The first official tabulation of the unemployed in this city was urged by City Councilor Clement A. Norton of Hyde Park in an order adopted yesterday by the council requesting the police to list the jobless when they make their tour of the city on April 1.

As there is sufficient blank space on the cards which will be used by the police in their census, he asked that they also mark down whether the residents are wage-earners and at work.

Woman Angler Wins Scarlet Necktie as Prize Liar

Miami Beach, Fla., March 25 — Not only are women invading many of the masculine fields but when it comes to fish stories the fair sex is begining to make its mark.

Mrs. Elliott F. Shepard won the prize at the first annual "liars party" of the Miami Beach Rod and Reel Club, an organization of deep sea anglers.

Mrs. Shepard came through with one about a tarpon she landed with scales so big that they were used for snowshoes in the Adirondacks. The prize was a scarlet necktie.

Feldman was graduated from the Boston University Law School in 1925 and practiced law in Boston for a short time before coming to Washington with Senator Walsh.

They escaped through a rear door and were only apprehended after police had chased them over a fence onto the roof of a garage. They are held for breaking and entering.

SCHOOLBOY, 19, SUCCESSFUL INVENTOR

Springfield, March 25 (AP)—A 19-year-old Springfield high school boy has found time between his studies to become a successful inventor and earn a large income, according to a story appearing today in the Springfield Union.

The youth is Henry Palt, a student in the Technical high school, who patented his first invention two years ago. Since then he has sold another outright and is now engaged in working out three other developments which he hopes to market.

His first invention was a new type of caster for a washing machine which is used on a product of the Kemp Arms Co. He is receiving royalties on this invention.

The second undertaking was even more successful, being a shock eliminator which is used on the 1930 model of an automobile manufactured by the General Motors Co. He sold this patent outright for a large sum.

Unlike the average inventor, Henry does not work with models —he has no workshop. A pencil and a piece of paper are his only "tools." When his ideas take definite form in his mind he puts them on drawings. Then he goes to a machine shop and has a model made.

School subjects in general do not interest him, but he explains that he must have an education. He does like the studies that deal with mathematics and drawing. He may attend college, and if he does, he need not worry about financing his course.

BRIDE, 18, TO BE STEPMA TO 12

Putnam, Ct., March 25—Now that Helen Denning, 18, world's junior champion stepmother, has been married to Wally Jones, 42-year-old switchlight-tender for the New Haven railroad, he will gather his brood of 12 children together again for her to mother.

The oldest of the Jones dozen is the same age as the stepmother, while the youngest is not yet three.

After the mother died on November 7, 1928, the Jones home was broken up and 12 children remaining out of the 14 born to the couple were separated and placed in various homes.

"I just love to take care of children," said the bride.

BANK PICTURES EVERY CHECK

Operating at the rate of 4000 an hour the new Recordak check photographing machines installed at the Atlantic National Bank is attracting wide attention in banking circles.

The machine, the first of its kind in Boston, makes a photographic copy of each of the average of 60,000 checks which pass through this bank each day. The film is treated for long preservation. A photograph is made of every check deposited or cashed.

These films are about the width of an ordinary paper match. The small size permits the storage of thousands of rolls—which are non-inflammable—in a small space.

The machine is the invention of a New York banker. It has saved large sums, and has been the means of detecting crimes.

Postpone Senate Lobby Hearing

Washington, March 25—Hearings of the Senate lobby committee scheduled to be resumed today, were postponed until April 1.

Chairman Caraway said this was because of the expected week's recess by the Senate after passing the tariff bill.

SENATE TURNS TO RELIEVING UNEMPLOYED

Washington, March 25—Freed of the tariff bill after seven long months, the Senate today turned to the enactment of good roads and public building bills as a means of relieving national unemployment.

The vote on the tariff bill, which will add something like $1,000,000,000 to the American tax burden, was 53 to 31.

The much-rewritten measure was sent to conference with the House, after its foes had hammered it for six hours with a steady barrage of denunciation, while its supposed friends sat in silence.

The personal Muscle Shoals was once more the Senate's "unfinished business" but administration leaders planned to lay it aside temporarily to permit action on the agricultural appropriation bill and the Elliott-Keyes public buildings bill.

The farm measure carried a $75,000,000 appropriation for new federal aid roads while the other would authorize a $155,000,000 public building program throughout the country in addition to all existing projects.

The Treasury Department already has initiated contracts for erecting $92,000,000 worth of public buildings this calendar year. As soon as the Elliott-Keyes bill is enacted, $40,000,000 more new projects will be awarded throughout the country, with the rest of the $115,000,000 held over until the spring of 1931. This year's additional construction will include the enormous $14,000,000 new federal building in Chicago, which will be the largest postoffice in the world.

Textile Workers Rejece Reduction

London, March 25 (AP)—A dispute of two years in the British woolen and textile industries appears as far from settlement as ever, operatives having refused by a three to one vote to accept the wage reduction proposals of the employers.

Lord MacMillan recommended the most recent wage increase be reduced from 10 to 5 per cent and urged reduction of the cost of living allowance.

The National Union of Textile Workers advised its members to accept the employers' offer and the vote of the workers is said to embarrass their leaders.

Fannie Brice Sues Film Company for $155,000

New York, March 25—Fannie Brice yesterday brought suit against the Art Cinema Corp. for $125,000 damages, alleging failure on the part of the company to star her in three pictures as agreed by contract.

Fannie Brice

She also asked $30,000 on the ground that she was promised $3000 a week for any time over 14 weeks that her film ran in New York.

She says the picture ran for more than 29 weeks.

Billy Rose, her husband, filed suit at the same time for $25,000 for alleged failure of the company to allow him to write the music for their productions, which, he alleges, had been provided for in an agreement that he reached with the corporation.

New Envoy Says Britain, U. S., Greatest Peace Factor

Washington, March 25—Co-operation between the United States and Great Britain is the greatest factor for the maintenance of world peace, Sir Ronald Lindsay, New British ambassador, declared in presenting his letters of credence to President Hoover.

Sir Ronald Lindsay

"The principal effort of diplomacy today is directed toward the noble task of making impossible any future outbreak of war. What for centuries has been the dream of poets and idealists has come to be regarded by practical men as a possibility of practical politics," Sir Ronald said.

NEW CARDINALS MAY BE NAMED THIS SPRING

Vatican City, March 25 (AP)—Creation of several new cardinals, now that the Sacred College has been reduced by deaths to only 60 out of its possible 70 members, is now looked for some time in the late spring or early summer possibly in May.

Pope Pius has given no indication of his plans, but the uncertainty of the time has not in any way diminished pragmatic considerations as to the probable choices of His Holiness.

In vatican spheres it is taken for granted that at least two Italian cardinals will be named, one to succeed the late Cardinal Gamba as archbishop of Turin, and another to take the place of the late Cardinal Perosi as a member of the "Curia," or body of cardinals more directly engaged with the central administration of the Catholic church.

As to the non-Italian cardinals, if any, to be created, speculation is more vague as the range of possibilities is wider.

By the death of Cardinal Merry del Val, Spain's representation among the wearers of the purple has been cut from five to four. Catholics of the western hemisphere are hoping that one of their outstanding prelates may fill the vacancy.

For the see of Turin, capital of Piedmont and residence of Crown Prince Humber, the name of Mgr. Sorlassina, now serving as patriarch of Jerusalem, has been proposed.

OLD QUEEN OF CIRCUS STARVES WITH 26 PETS

Haverhill, March 25—Penniless and suffering, surrounded by 26 starving dogs and cats, Gertrude Swasey, 72, once famous circus bareback rider, today faced removal to the city poor farm from her three-room tenement in Washington ave.

Once the queen of a circus, with plenty of money, fame and friends, Mrs. Swasey has been living in a little tenement off the railroad station.

Until about two years ago she was matron at the railroad station, later working in restaurant kitchens to obtain food for herself and her nine dogs and 17 cats.

Some time ago the city took steps to have the animals removed, but proceedings were dropped when Mrs. Swasey said she had reduced the number to three or four.

Recently word came to Daniel Hanlon, agent of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, that the cats and dogs were starving.

A meek who obtained entrance to the house with some coal to present Mrs. Swasey from freezing is reported to have said the dogs were so hungry they fell on the black nuggets and attempted to eat them.

Hanlon plans to force open the doors, which are said to be barricaded.

NEW LEADS ARE PROBED IN GARRETT PENSION CASE

writer of that letter, whether a man or woman, to get in touch with him, either by telephone or another letter.

He is anxious to meet the writer personally and is willing that the meeting shall take place at any designated point.

While Warner declined to reveal any of the information contained in the unsigned letter, it is believed to involve the identities and contacts of the "men behind" organized liquor and vice traffic and police corruption in Boston.

WILL LAST A MONTH

More and more it became apparent today as the the attorney-general pursued his relentless inquiry directed at the source of the Garrett fortune and "all other matters," that another month will hardly suffice for concluding the investigation.

"I hope to resume the public hearings on Thursday or Friday," Warner said today. "In any event I expect to hold only one hearing this week."

While he did not say so, it was believed this one hearing would be held for the sole purpose of calling Alfred H. Brissenden, Mrs. Garrett's brother-in-law, as a witness and so testing at once—if the test must be made—the constitutionality of the new legislative mandate for the Garrett investigation.

Neither Warner nor any one of his aides has asked or received police protection because of numerous death threats received. These threats, it is believed, are entirely the work of cranks.

The Hotel Ritz case continues to be the keystone of the attorney-general's bridge now building between existing conditions and the men responsible for them.

Brissenden's counsel declares his client will again refuse to testify and Warner is willing to take the case at once to the Supreme Court to test the validity of the power invested in him by the General Court. No delay is expected in the court ruling on this question.

EVIDENCE PILING UP

The probable further extension of time needed results from the great mass of evidence pouring into the attorney-general's office—evidence of conditions whose rottenness has been shielded from the public gaze not only by police but by men who can be described as prominent in Boston's affairs.

If the attorney-general and his investigators are to get at the very bottom of the situation—and the legislature as well as Warner himself appears to be so determined—then more than another month will be needed.

That keystone will be fitted in at the proper time by the attorney-general with the testimony of Albert K. Sidlinger, Nicholas J. Cockinos and men whose identity the public at the present time does not even remotely suspect.

There are at least a dozen other cases of importance in which startling evidence has been found and there are leads to as many more.

It is reported, for instance, that the probe has already led into charges that promotions in the police department were bought with money.

The attorney-general does not expect verification of every rumor and report centering about police and law enforcement in Boston in the last five years, but he does intend to dispose of those rumors and reports in one way or another.

FOUR QUIZZED TODAY

Four persons were interviewed by the Attorney-General and his aides today. One was former Rep. John F. Sheehan, one of the agitators for the present investigation, who may be called as a witness in connection with the Hotel Ritz case.

Another was William Crawford, former junior State chemist in charge of liquor analysis at the State House. Crawford was questioned for the fourth time by Warner and went over with him the reports of liquor analysis he made for the Boston police before the scandal which was followed by his discharge from the health department, subsequent reinstatement on order of the courts and transfer to the water department at Lawrence.

It is common knowledge that Warner has hit upon startling evidence in the records of liquor analyses, but the exact nature of it has not been hinted.

The other two questioned today were unidentified. Both were men. One was questioned at length by State Detectives John Stokes and Joseph Ferrari. The other was interviewed by Asst. Atty.-Gen. George B. Louris.

Senate ways and means committee reported "ought to pass" on the new investigation resolve, and the bill was to be passed under rule suspension in the Senate late today.

It will then go to Governor Allen tomorrow upon his return from Washington and be signed in time for Warner to resume his public hearings, under the new powers invested in him, on Thursday if he wishes.

Sidlinger Reveals Story Just to Give Truth to Public

In telling his story Albert K. Sidlinger made it clear he is not aspiring for the $5000 reward offered by the Boston Evening American. He declared he does not want a cent of money from any source, but is revealing conditions solely to inform the public of what transpires under the surface.

U.S. GUARD SHOT IN CHINA CLASH

Shanghai, March 25 (AP)—The American Yangtze rapids steamer, the Ifung, was fired upon late yesterday by Communists waving red flags, 200 miles above Hankow.

The fire was returned by American naval guards, one of whom, F. C. Roberts, member of the American guard, was wounded in the left arm.

Almost nationwide telegraphic investigation the past 12 hours disclosed that 16 American Catholic missionaries—ten men and six women—are isolated at Kanchow, Kiangsi Province, and unable to come to coastal cities for safety owing to depredations of hordes of Chinese bandits and Communists.

Peiping, March 25 (AP)—C. T. Wang, Nationalist foreign minister, today telegraphed the American legation here that renewed measures are being taken to protect missionaries in Kanchow.

decide to operate their own public schools for Jewish children.

Under the British North America act Protestants and Catholics are guaranteed "full educational rights." But under that act Jewish children were not considered.

There are 100,000 children in Catholic schools, no Jewish children included. The Jewish children have all been sent to Montreal's Protestant schools, with children numbering 33,000, including 12,000 Jewish children. Refused any representation on the Protestant school board, parents of Jewish children decide to have their own schools. The Catholic authorities protest against passage of an act authorizing such Jewish schools on the grounds that it would endanger rights granted by the British North American act

Montreal will have three public school systems based on religious differences. Freedom from such complications in this country prove the wisdom of keeping the government and its schools separate from religions. Teaching religion is the business of parents and clergy, teaching demonstrable fact is the business of the public schools.

ALBATROSS ON MAWSON SHIP GET SEASICK

Radio via London

S. S. Discovery, March 23 (Delayed)—After our last deep station was executed at a point in Jeffrey Deep, south of Leeuwin's Deep, circumstances were unfavorable to further continuance of marine work, consequently our scientific program is now practically concluded.

A few birds are still brought aboard alive. It is strange that the stately albatross thus arriving aboard is at once seasick.

The captives are allowed to walk freely about the deck, because the takeoff is not suitable for their rising and flying away. They sit about the deck in a more or less friendly and interested fashion, occasionally snapping with their great beaks at passersby. On one occasion, Howard, our chemist and hydrologist, was relieved of a large part of a most necessary garment.

CURED AND FREED

Sooner or later, Falla, our ornithologist, relieves the captives of their parasitic mallophaga for the benefit of our collections. This operation is popularly called "delousing." The birds are then freed.

Campbell has had many difficulties to overcome in order to maintain the echo-sounder in communication.

By careful nursing, he is still getting good results, notwithstanding the development of a hair crack in the casting of the main compressed air cylinder.

MEET DELAY

Capt. Davis and the ship's officers, MacKenzie, Colbeck and Child, have been pushing the Discovery along at her best speed for some days. However, strong easterly headwinds are prevailing instead of the usual westrailia of the region. Thus our daily progress is diminished.

The engines have been pushed to the full and their performance is very creditable to Engineers Griggs and Welsh.

At noon today, our position was latitude 35.05 south, longitude 121.29 east.

4 NEW PLANETS 'DISCOVERED' BY ITALIAN

London, March 25 (INS)—The discovery of four new planets, which reveals that the solar system is 50 times greater than heretofore conceived, was announced today by Prof. Rafael Bendandi, former cabinet maker of Rome, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Rome.

His announcement followed the recent discovery of a similar planet by Prof. Lowell at Flagstaff, Ariz.

The fourth of the newly discovered planets is seven times more distant from the sun that Neptune, Prof. Bendandi claimed.

"My method of studying astral bodies is totally different from the usual calculations, but I have proved my discovery by astronomical and mathematical methods. This discovery means that the solar system is at least 50 times greater than at present conceived," Bendandi said.

Rome newspapers today remained skeptical of Bendandi's claims.

Gilbert & Barker's Story

"We make two principal uses of the telephone.

"The first is in handling orders. We are able to compete successfully with firms in distant parts of the country due to our system of telephoning orders.

"The second is in our inventory control. We get constant reports of sales conditions from our representatives, and as a result we can keep our stock always in condition to supply immediate service."

THE airplane and automotive industries demand of others the same sort of speed that they themselves impart to many lines of business. When they want new equipment, for example, it must be furnished at once by some manufacturer.

As a result, branch factories have been established by many manufacturers to meet this demand for speed.

The Gilbert & Barker Company of Springfield has found a way of giving fast service on its gasoline and oil handling equipment from a single large plant. The time which other concerns save in shipping from branches is saved by this firm in speedy handling of orders — by telephone.

Every order requiring speed is telephoned to Springfield, whether the salesman be in New England or on the Pacific Coast. The time thus saved allows Gilbert & Barker to serve the entire country without the expense of maintaining widely separated branches.

Is your business faced with the necessity of opening branches to meet competition? Before taking on such an increase in overhead, consider how much time you can save by handling orders by telephone. It may more than compensate for the disadvantages of distance from your market. We shall be glad to tell you how our rapid, dependable, economical telephone service will do it.

MAINE FISHERY SURVEY VOTED IN TIDAL BAYS

Washington, March 25 (AP)—Survey of Passamaquoddy and Cobscook bays in Maine to determine the possible effect of the proposed $75,000,000 Cooper power project upon Canadian and American fisheries was approved today by the House foreign affairs committee.

This action followed a hearing at which Dexter P. Cooper, of Dexter P. Cooper, Inc., Eastport, Me., said he was "entirely agreeable" to the investigation.

Cooper spoke on the Martin resolution to authorize expenditure of $45,000 for the American half of the investigation. Canada would furnish a like sum.

Assistant Secretary of State Wilbur J. Carr also approved the investigations. He said there was some apprehension in the fishing industry in New Brunswick and Maine over the power project, which would use the movement of the tides in the bays to generate electric power.

L. Radcliffe, deputy commissioner of fisheries, and E. Higgins, chief of the division of scientific inquiry, said it was believed the abundance of microscopic plant and animal life was responsible for compensation of the herring and pollock fisheries in those waters and that the erection of dams might destroy the fisheries.

The Soo line was on the corner of Spring Lane, the Rutland Railroad was two buildings further south. Next was the Wabash and the C. B. & Q. was in the low structure next to the church. The Old South Building now occupies all the space from Spring Lane,

A SIMPLE STEP TOWARDS HEALTH

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is a Daily Essential and Millions Know Its Effectiveness in Relief of Constipation

Perhaps the one simple thing you are not doing to guarantee permanent health is having sufficient roughage in your food. Absence of this roughage is the direct cause of constipation which results in so many other ills—headaches, listlessness, general depression, indigestion and, sometimes, serious disease.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is roughage. It is positively guaranteed to relieve both temporary and recurring constipation or the purchase price will be refunded. Two tablespoons daily (in serious cases, with each meal) is the proper amount.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN also helps you to health in other ways. It is rich in iron, practically all of which goes into the blood, bringing red, healthy color to the complexion. It helps prevent anemia. Be sure to include it in reducing diets.

Many eat Kellogg's ALL-BRAN with cream or milk added. It is a delicious addition to cereals, fruits and soups. In cooked foods, it is just as effective in the relief of constipation. Recommended by doctors. Ask your grocer for Kellogg's ALL-BRAN in the red-and-green package. Served everywhere. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

$2,150,000,000 FOR NEW SOVIET INDUSTRIES

Moscow, March 25 (AP)—Complete "Americanization" of its industries appears to be the goal of the Soviet Government.

Under the stimulus of American engineering skill and enterprise, the Government today decided to erect this year, on modern American lines, a series of huge industrial plants costing $2,150,000,000.

The Government is scrapping most other methods of construction and adopting those which have given the United States first place in world industry. No less than 39 American and technical firms are now operating in Soviet Russia, between them supervising nearly $3,000,000,000 worth of construction.

Since the withdrawal of W. A. Harriman & Co. from the big Georgian manganese concession, no American financial interests have invested capital in Soviet enterprises, but the number of American engineering firms securing profitable contracts is increasing.

Among other features at the Salem celebration will be the landing of the historic ship Arabella, with as complete a representation of the landing of settlers as possible.

Dow described the first full-page advertisement in any American newspaper, that appeared in Boston in 1768. Instead of the bold type used in advertising today, he explained that this full page ad. submitted by a dry goods store, itemized every article of merchandise on the shelves of the store.

This advertisement, he said, has been the principal source of information as to the kinds of clothing used in that early period.

George H. Evans, president of the Massachusetts Library Club, spoke on "Plans for the Joint Meeting of New England Library Club at Swampscott, in June."

William Alcott, librarian of the Boston Globe and president of the National Special Libraries Association, outlined plans for the national convention to be held in San Francisco the last of June. George Winthrop Lee spoke on "Plans for the Massachusetts Tercentenary."

The speakers were introduced by Rev. Fred T. Persons, librarian of the Congregational Library of Boston.

MUSIC CLUBS HAVE FINAL LUNCHEON

By NANCY BREWSTER

The Massachusetts Federation of Music Clubs held its final luncheon-meeting of the season at the Hotel Statler today with Mrs. Mary G. Reed, state president, presiding.

Representatives of the many music clubs throughout the state attended, reporting on the various activities of their districts. James A. Moyer, director, University Extension recently appointed to the National Committee on Radio Education was the principal speaker, "Radio Education" being the subject of his address.

Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller, wife of the former governor, and Mrs. Frank G. Allen wife of the present governor sat side by side at the head table, each casting her vote for the furtherance of good music in home, school and country.

Others to approve the work of the State Federation of Music Clubs were Mme. Teresa Cerutti, dramatic dancer; Mme. Loretta Laurenti, Carl Johnson, Swedish consul and his wife and Mrs. Bradbury Cushing.

WESTFIELD WOMAN'S CLUB

Tonight is the annual Guest Night of the club with Toni Skeyhill of New York as the speaker. "Mussolini and the Black Shirts" will be his subject. He took part in the famous march on Rome.

The talk is meant especially to attract a large male audience. Mrs. Azel A. Packard, state president, is an honored guest.

At its monthly meeting, the community welfare committee will present as the speaker, Ray Hubbard, of the executive board, "Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. "Mending Broken Homes" will be his topic.

CHELSEA HADASSAH

The unit presents a theatrical production each year and tonight it will take the form of a musical and minstrel revue, participated in by Hadassah members and held in the Chelsea High School Auditorium.

Sixty women will appear in the many scenes, among them Mrs. Harry S. Mann, president; Mrs. Hilal Kaplan, Mrs. Philip Lewitsky, Mrs. Etta Wigman Toltz, Mrs. Mirian Banks Greunon, Mrs. Robert Cogan Weinstein, Mary Burke Mrs. Dora Gold, Mrs. Frieda Lichter, Mrs. Minerva Cogan Orloff, Mrs. Freda Mann, Mrs. Lillian Cohen, Mrs. Annette Friedman, Sadie Covnil, Anna Snyder, Flora Laips and Doris Cohen.

WOMEN'S CITY CLUB

Mary Caroline Crawford, author and lecturer, will tell, on "Uneut Leaves from Famous Families of Old New England" at the clubhouse tonight at 8:15 p. m. She is a charter member. Two of her notable achievements were development of the Ford Hall Forum, created because of her interest and responsibility, and the Old South Forum, of which she has been director 15 years.

Her library while this not-th will really be manuscript pre-view of an important two-volume work covering the derivation, background and achievements of many of New England's first families, including, of course those in Boston.

GENERAL FEDERATION

A distinctly new trend in the women's club movement in foreign lands has developed, and it is of vital concern to American clubwomen. Formerly, practically all of the clubs in foreign countries applying for membership in the General Federation, were comprised of American born women, or at least of English speaking women. But, now, all that is rapidly changing.

Groups of native born women are organizing their own clubs and asking the privilege of pooling their interests with those of the General Federation.

Of the three new foreign clubs received into membership between the Swampscott Council meeting and the board meeting, two are of native born women. Their constitutions were submitted in their native language.

From a report of the secretary of International Clubs, Dr. Clara E. Sondelin, the Juneau, Alaska, Woman's Club, says this year's activities will stress community property legislation; a Detention Home; a clinic for children and a drive for a 200 membership, now 43.

The Women's Club of Seoul, Korea, is mainly a philanthropic club, supporting a leper and a beggar boy and making gifts to Japanese and Korean orphanages.

TWENTIETH CENTURY CLUB

At the weekly luncheon-meetings next Saturday, C. Joubert will talk on "Cuba, the Island, and Its People." He will give an outline of the social conditions under which the typical Cuban lives today. The Cuban consul Senor William Gonzales, will be a guest of the club.

Delta Chapter to Hold Informal Dance

The Delta chapter of the Psi Omega fraternity of the Tufts Dental School will hold an informal dance at the University Club, tomorrow evening. With the following committee in charge: Irving A. Swenson, '30, of Norwalk, Conn.; John L. Bell, '32, of Reading, Pa.; and Robert S. Barry, '32, of Milton.

Fetching Basque Styles All the Rage Now Among Smart Women at Resorts

SOPHISTICATED resort life with a peasant flavor! That is the delightful incongruity of Southern life as gauged by its fashions this winter. The smart world, restless and traveled as it is, has gone to a primitive origin for the pattern of its resort fashions.

It all began at Biarritz last summer when the haute monde foregathered there for the season The famous resort is situated in the stronghold of the Basque people, that colorful, hardy race which is part French and part Spanish. From them came the inspiration for a new resort garb for a nomadic group of moderns. The bright colorings of their clothes, the stripes taken from the very coverings of toiling oxen, their berets already a world-wide fashion, and the jaunty costumes of the fishermen were snatched as inspiration for new play clothes. Now they are the dominant theme for fashions of the southern resorts.

THIS peasant flavor to our modern play interlude is undeniably picturesque—the color of it alone would add charm even if there were not the added zest of striking costume effects. On the beach, looking on at the sports or tea-ing in the afternoon, one cannot help but see the impression this vogue has made.

There are broadly-striped silk or cotton frocks which may be worn with the brief nautical-looking jackets of sailors. There is the beret, in every color, to accompany the sports costume or the beach suit. There are the striped sweaters and flowing trousers of the fisherman, which do duty on the beach. Wide sun hats of a rough straw, like those worn by the peasants in the fields, protect patrician features from the sun's glare. And at teatime, quaintly flowered sprigged frocks, which might well be the Sunday best of Basque maidens, appear at fashionable rendezvous. Even the pointed kerchief finds its way to the neckline of casual little frocks.

So you see you simply must Basque in fashion this season!

THE Mary Nowitsky Beach Ensemble pictured is striking and fascinating in its blending of brilliant colors. The trousers are wistaria color, quite wide, and attached to a fitted yoke over the hips; the tuck-in blouse is sleeveless, with interesting neckline, the tailored detail of which is piped in vivid magenta red, as is the trouser yoke. The coat is hand blocked in a Harlequenade pattern of Magenta, three shades of blue, and three shades of lavender and purple, intersected with bright yellow.

DAILY ANTIQUE

No. 55

Table cutlery makes an absorbing study for anyone interested in the romance of antiquity. Forks are a comparatively new invention as individual eating gear. They came into use as such in Italy in the sixteenth century. Previously, and for a couple of centuries afterwards, they were used only for serving purposes.

The table knife developed from the dagger. Each guest carried his own, and hacked his meat or hacked his table cloth as the meal's convivality seemed to suggest.

Cardinal Richelieu is said to have taken offense at a noble guest who persisted in picking his teeth with the point of his knife. He therefore ordered all table knives in his establisament to be ground down to a blunt edge.

For another purpose, namely, to put a stop to assassinations, Louis XIV promulgated a law against pointed tableknives. Later, to give greater ease in conveying "pease and jellies" and such food to the mouth, the ends of knives were made broad and spatulate.

This early knife and fork are of a type common in America at the time of the American Revolution. They are owned by Dr. John H. Chesver of 69 Westminster ave., Arlington, whose great-great-grandfather, Benjamin Chesver, was born in Salem in 1747, and married Ruth Osgood in 1773.

In connection with the Massachusetts Tercentenary Year, the Boston Evening American is publishing daily photographs of interesting antiques. Owners of genuine antiques, particularly of Colonial or early American origin or of historic association, are invited to forward photographs and records for publication. If a photograph is not available, the American will send a cameraman to photograph the antique, provided the owner lives in Greater Boston. Address the 'Antique Editor, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston."

"MOST APPEALING FEMININE CHARM?"

Movie Directors say: "Lovely Skin"

"No one single beauty has the tremendous appeal to the emotions that beautifully smooth skin has," say 45 of Hollywood's greatest directors, and the famous screen stars agree.

All Hollywood is keenly aware of the power which lies in naturally lovely skin. Because their skin must be flower-like in its smoothness, 9 out of 10 screen stars use Lux Toilet Soap.

RUTH TAYLOR

Ruth Taylor, whose fair, lovely skin has had so much to do in making her famous, says: "I always use Lux Toilet Soap to guard my skin."

Dark haired, vital Louise Brooks says: "Close-ups are so revealing! One can't possibly hide the texture of the skin. That is why so many of us use Lux Toilet Soap."

LOUISE BROOKS

Phyllis Crane, Warner Brothers' delightful star, also uses this delicately fragrant white soap. "It keeps my skin so soft and smooth," she says.

Let Lux Toilet Soap guard your skin, too! It has such gentle, caressing lather! Luxury such as you have found only in fine French soaps at 50c and $1.00 the cake

Why You Should Never Cut a Corn

If you are troubled with corns or calluses, do not run the risk of infection by paring them. Statistics show that many deaths have occurred from this seemingly innocent practice of caring corns.

Simply go to your druggist and get a few cents worth of Freezone, and apply this on any painful corn or callous. Immediately the pain will disappear and in a short time the corn or callous will loosen and lift off easily with the fingers—root and all—leaving the surrounding skin in a healthy normal condition.

This, together with the fact that Iceland overcomes such afflictions as sore, tired, aching, puffed or burning feet and makes them cool, easy and comfortable, is probably responsible for the hearty endorsement given it by druggists.

To rid one's feet of every hard corn, soft corn, corn between the toes or painful calluses in such a pleasant and safe way, makes it seem the height of folly for anyone to pare a corn and people are warned to stop it.

EXHIBIT GIFT TO RED CROSS

In the children's room of the Boston public library, where it is to remain this week and part of next, is an exhibit, loaned by the Junior Red Cross of the Trade School for Girls. This material is to be sent as a gift to the Junior Red Cross in Pontevedra, Jugo-Slavia.

The exhibit is one of a series of displays of material interesting to young people, which are constantly on view in the children's department of the central and branch libraries. The present display is unique in that it is work done in local schools to be sent abroad in return for material which has been received here.

A collection of embroidered material and woolen goods made by the girls was sent to the students of the Trade School for Girls. In return they have prepared the present exhibit.

Letters From Readers

Something to Think About

Editor Boston American:

Ignorance or disregard of economic laws often, in spite of the very best motives, produce inhumane results from humane legislation.

Nobody can deny that the greatest present threat to the old age of our working men and women is unemployment. One of the greatest causes of unemployment is the removal of existing industries to other parts of the country, and the failure of sufficient new industries to take their place.

The chief cause of this condition is that our humane labor laws are so far ahead of many other states that it is more expensive for an industry to operate in Massachusetts, and also taxes are very much higher.

The result will be fatal if we follow the example of England and Australia, by making operation too expensive for our industries to live, endeavoring to make up the difference by doles, pensions and taxes. Instead of that it is our first duty to enable our industries to increase. That increase is necessary to enable our people to care for themselves, and provide for their old age, through steady employment in the productive industries which these palliative measures are contributing to discourage and suppress.

Our best course, under the circumstances, is not to go farther in the line of palliatives until conditions can be more nearly evened up in the states where competitive industries are locating.

The residents of my district have expressed their appreciation of my efforts and they are cognizant of the fact that the co-operation of your newspaper and officials aided me, materially, in making this day one to be remembered.

Denies Sullivan Heads Association

Editor Boston American:

I desire to direct your attention to the item appearing in the Boston Evening American under date of March 19, 1930, wherein certain charges were made against the Boston Elevated Railway Company by one Alexander Sullivan, purporting to be the president of the East Boston Betterment Association.

In order to correct an erroneous impression created by this article, the East Boston Betterment Association has not authorized anyone to make any statement in its behalf, and is in no way interested in the personal grievances of any individual towards the Boston Elevated Railway Company. For your information, Mr. Sullivan is not president of this association, nor an officer thereof.

All Day Parking Called Menace

Editor Boston American:

According to the press reports a considerable number of those at the parking conference were against the ban on parking in the streets. I wonder if they have given thought to the danger of blocking up the streets all day long by machines. Machines parked temporarily cannot be stopped, but those who park their machines all day long must be stopped in the interest of human life.

Says Prohibition Fails to Prohibit

Editor Boston American:

With all the demonstration against prohibition, you cannot disguise the fact that prohibition does not prohibit. Just as soon as you begin to prohibit anything in this world, you are going to heighten the pleasure in the thing forbidden. Many of us are far better without alcohol in any form, but some of us are better with the use of it temperately.

Prohibition has wiped out the saloon, but through another door it is still with us. There are 10,000 saloons running in New York city, and probably half of this number in Greater Boston. Now I am advocating nothing against prohibition, except that it does not meet the end, after 10 years, its defenders claimed for it. We are just as badly off as we ever were in many respects. Prohibition has done some good, but not enough to justify its enforcement.

Says Idleness Does Not Suit the Aged

Editor Boston American:

A speaker said in a Boston forum that the best time in a man's life is between 70 and 80. A man of that age seldom goes off half cocked.

Young and middle age folk think that we elder people have passed the age when we can enjoy good things of life. They are wrong. The older we grow the more amusement we have in watching the young slip, where we slipped years ago, and how wearily they pick themselves up. Idleness does not suit the aged. More old men died in the past year from inactivity than from running for a train.

How About Third Degree Punishment?

Editor Boston American:

A prisoner [illegible] on the force in another city, told me that in every police station in that city, rubber hose for the purpose of beatings in the third degree is kept for service.

If a prisoner does not confess his guilt and refuses to answer questions that are put to him by the detectives in the way they want him to answer them, he is struck usually from behind unexpectedly with this rubber hose.

This gives him a terrible shock and terrorizes him. If he dares to "get sassy," as the boys call it, he is treated in a way that indicates that such severity in punishment, is likely to make the victim obstinate.

Castle Island Has Historic Interest

Editor Boston American:

During the Tercentenary, Castle Island should be featured. It borders on South Boston and South Boston is one of the most interesting historical parts of Old Boston.

Castle Island with its defenses was built in 1633 when the Back Ba[illegible] was a swamp and unapproachable. It is a vantage point for the protection of Boston. Convicts were confined there in 1785. In 1798 it was ceded to the United States, but prisoners were detained there until Charlestown prison was erected. Castle Island was a great duelling ground. Fatal duels were fought there. Marble slabs marked the victims' graves. These have since been removed. Visitors to Boston in July should keep Castle Island in mind. The half has not been told about this historical spot. It should belong to the city of Boston and be improved.

City Playgrounds Fill Urgent Need

Editor Boston American:

I read that New York city will spend $4,000,000 for playgrounds scientifically located and artificially directed. Nothing is more important than this type of enjoyment for the growing generation. All honor to Joseph Lee of Boston, the first man who ever placed playgrounds on the map. He has done wonders in this line and never should be forgotten.

Why playgrounds in large cities for children? I saw a bright looking child peeping out of the window in a congested portion of this city. There was no place for this child to play. This made me think more than ever of the blessing of playgrounds.

Hears Biscuit Dough Replaces Rolling Pin

Editor Boston American:

According to the paper, infuriated wives have discarded the rolling pin and are hurling biscuit dough at discordant hubbies. This was made known last week in a divorce suit in the Middlesex Probate Court.

Biscuit dough, if not too tough, is not a bad idea to throw at an unrepentant partner in life. If the rolling pin has been laid aside, that time-worn implement that has played such a conspicuous part in the history of family squabbles, this is good news. That pin has terrorized many a wayward, late-coming-home-at-night husband, who has removed his shoes to avoid squeaks on the stairs. I hope dough will prevail.

Greed Makes War Always Imminent

Editor Boston American:

Something was said in your letter column about war. Let me say this: There are still war clouds over the sky and war itself is on in China and elsewhere. There is much cause for anxiety.

The greed of men and nations is liable to break into a deluge of war on the slightest provocation. We may talk about the League of Nations and World Court, but we have to reckon with human nature which carries a chip on its shoulder.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

BULWER LYTTON'S play called "Richelieu" has more than once lifted an ambitious actor out of modest talents into the higher reaches of fame. In the case of Walter Hampden, who last night at the Wilbur, brought forth a new version of the old drama, it was the plodding actor who gave the fine wine fresh color and new interest; glowing rejuvenation, if you prefer. The Hampden characterization of the crafty old cardinal was atonement in full for a season of serious drama noted chiefly for its limited temptations.

In this Arthur Goodrich revision of Lytton's "Richelieu," the stern and ruthless Prince of the Church, who ruled and managed the France of Louis XIII is revealed first as a politician, of course. But blended into the character are human traits with which the dent playgoer is caught and held fast: grim humor, too, draws out its measure of honest smiles and pleasant chuckles. And so, Mr. Hampden played upon the moods of history's most picturesque statesman. If there were flaws in Mr. Hampden's performance they escaped the eye; you would tell that by the unabating greeting that followed every curtain. When the theater can fill its many temples with entertainment as sound and with acting as engaging as Mr. Hampden has brought to town, the drama's long mourning bench will be stripped of its wailing brethren.

MR. HAMPDEN'S own performance was as impressive as anything that has moved upon our local stage. In word and gesture he fulfilled every demand of dignity and good taste; he was the actor constantly rising above his play. But the heavy duty of the performance was not held alone by Hampden talents. There was the Joseph of Cecil Yapp to give you encouragement—the faithful retainer who alone dared to chide his master. In their scenes together Mr. Hampden and Mr. Yapp were just two skilled veterans toying with each other. It brightened many of the evening's dull corners.

IT was good old swash-buckling melodrama—this "Richelieu." And therein, of course, you found the strutting swordsman, the intriguing noble and lovely ladies. These roles were voiced by Louis Polan, Moffatt Johnston, Ernest Rowan Hagues and C. Norman Hammond, each of whom, in his own fancy, swashed and buckled and intrigued. Well done, too, but nothing of great novelty. Evelyn Gordich and Ingeborg Torrup provided what feminine interest you might expect to discover in the Richelieu retinue. Faithful to their roles. It was seen, but merely of passing concern.

"RICHELIEU" becomes another sparkling gem in Mr. Hampden's growing repertoire; a brilliant bit of theatrical ware you can scarcely afford to miss.

LUCILE POWER IS CO-STAR FOR "BILLY THE KID"

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service
Copyright, 1930, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, March 25.

THE days of Cinderella and Santa Claus fantasies and other similar miracles have not passed in Hollywood. Lucile Powers, who is said to be a youthful edition of Corinne Griffith—and if she is, all we can say is that she is a beauty—has just signed a long-term contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

It is not just a mere contract. If you know what I mean, but a chance to play the feminine lead in "Billy, the Kid," King Vidor's next picture.

Louella O. Parsons

Vidor is so enthusiastic over his "Billy, the Kid" that he is using superlative adjectives in describing it. He has all sorts of interesting data about the boy bandit and while, naturally, Johnny Mack Brown is the principal figure, as the bandit, the girl also comes in for a colorful role. Pretty good for a newcomer to make her debut in a King Vidor picture.

DOROTHY MACKAILL and First National just seem unable to part company. Maybe it's just as well for they ought to understand each other after seven years' association. When Hal Wallis discovered that Dot couldn't finish at Fox in time to play the lead in "The Girl of the Golden West" he took a rain check and told Dot the very next good part was for her. Yesterday Hal, who is the big boss at First National, telephoned to Dorothy and in an hour had signed her to play the feminine lead in "The Bad Man" opposite Walter Huston. O. P. Heggie also has an important role in this picture.

ALL THE WORLD is waiting for Lon Chaney's first talkie. The reason we haven't had a definite announcement as to what it will be is because Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has been dickering for the sound rights to "The Unholy Three" which they produced in the silent version with Chaney several years ago. Everything is settled now and "The Unholy Three" is in complete possession of M. G. M. Harry Earle, the midget, will have a part and Jack Conway will direct Chaney the first time he speaks for the screen.

GARBO TALKIE AT ORPHEUM

GRETA GARBO, in .er first all-talking picture, "Anna Christie," and Anita Stewart, screen star, headlining an excellent vaudeville bill, is attracting capacity crowds to Loew's Orpheum this week. As the pathetic Anna of Eugene O'Neill's celebrated drama, Miss Garbo gives an unforgettable portrayal and the revealing of her voice is a surprise to her numberless admirers. It is entirely typical of her other characteristics. With the slight Swedish acent her voice is perfectly suited to the role. The supporting cast, including Marie Dressler, Charles Bickford and George Marion, is superb.

Anita Stewart

The appearance of Miss Stewart on the stage is the signal for an outburst of applause. Her legion of followers have not forgotten the popular film luminary, who has temporarily deserted motion pictures. It is safe to assume, however, that she will soon return to picture making, judging from the splendid quality of her speaking and singing voice. Miss Stewart instantly captivates her audience and then turns to entertaining them with a delightful offering of "Character Studies in Song, especially written for the star by Edgar Allen Woolf.

"Down Home," a revue act with a Southern locale, is presented by a company of nine blackface singers, dancers and instrumentalists, which features Josie Carole, Zeppilin Four, Frank and Forman and the Luell Sisters. Sam Hearn, rube comedian and violinist, scores a big hit, as do also Claude and Clarence Stroud, dancers, and Chapelle and Carlton, acrobats.

ALL-STAR BILL AT GAYETY

AN all-star vaudeville bill has been added to the regular burlesque show at the Gayety Theater, and as a result patrons of the Washington st. burlesque house enjoyed an added treat last night. The vaudeville was fast and diversified.

The burlesque show, "Wine, Woman and Song," was headed by Harry Evanson and Jyes La Rue. Evanson proved his merit as a boob comic, while the singing and dancing of Miss La Rue was what the audience wanted in large measure.

Holub's Gayety orchestra had some novelties and worked deftly with the vaudeville.

McCORMACK PICTURE TRUE FILM GEM

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

JOHN McCORMACK'S "Song o' My Heart" is a picture heart of great price. It is a notable effort in a number of ways; in its recording it is the peak achievement of the throated screen. A few times we closed our eyes to test this point; and we found that the voice of the tenor was so life-like that it were easy to imagine him in the flesh-and-blood before us, and not his shadow merely. A distinguished audience greeted the New England premiere of this film at the Majestic; its frequent and hearty applause was assuredly as fine a tribute to marvelous merit and beautiful singing as one could wish to hear. Fine as he is on the concert stage, Mr. McCormack seemed none the less so last night; and we will right here and now commend his "Little Boy Blue" as so sweet as to take off much of the edge of its ineffable sadness. Great were a number of the songs, but this Eugene Field's lyric welingh "stopped the show."

BUT Mr. McCormack's voice is by no means the sole glory of "Song o' My Heart." As the reels unfold its exceeding charm, we felt ourselves enthusiastic, and growing more so as time passed. Analyze this charm we tried to do; and we came to the conclusion that in the combination of singing; J. J. McCarthy—more of whom anon—Director Frank Borzage and the Fox policy, there has been born that rare bird that all producers yearn for and few are fated to father, a "natural." Most star films fail in that they are "mostly star"; Mr. McCormack here has unusualy interesting surroundings. There is a gentleness about the story that is invigorating; a wholesomeness of acting that is refreshing in the extreme, not the least being that of some personality hitherto unheard and unseen on the audible cinema. Compared to the usual synthetic stuff of the studios, these settings in picturesque Irish landscape are a heaven to the had place. The photography is almost as flawless as the voice reproduction; play of lights and shadow holds the allure of the best in the old silent drama.

MR. McCORMACK sings delightful numbers, among them "The Rose of Tralee," "Then I'll Remember Me," "Ireland, Mother Ireland," and "I Hear You Calling Me." In the course of the picture he gives eleven, a generous offering, the more so when we find them all in pleasing and about perfectly passed along to our ears. Among the famous tenor's aides are the screaming funny Jim Kerrigan and J. Farrell Macdonald, whose frequent passages at rapid-fire repartee evoke gales of merriment; the adorable naturalness of Maureen O'Sullivan and Tom Conway, these two "finds" when the Emerald Isle sequences were being made; and the cleverness of Emily Fitzroy and Effie Ellsler.

NOW a word about unseen and unheard personages who had a big hand in this picture. Mr. Borzage's work, almost always good, here swings beyond directorial technique into the poetic; he wreathes in somehow a sentiment that is soon atmosphere, with the beauty of an Irish summer day. Then there is the Mr. McCarthy above referred to; not so well known as he should be, but a name to conjure with in the industry. Few knew their motion picture values as does he. Remembered for his superb handling of "The Big Parade," he again is entitled to high praise for supervising 'Song o' My Heart" from start to finish. He knows his films; his picture is worth everyone's seeing—and hearing! It's sweet to the eye, and magic to the ear.

HOWARD STAR IS TERESINA

TERESINA, noted figure along the Mutual burlesque wheel, scintillates at the Old Howard this week. The dancer received a warm welcome at her opening performance yesterday. The big show is the "Pasquo Revue," headed by that versatile comedian, Harry "Pep" Pearce. Evelyn Burke was given a big hand. Betty Leeming and Nellie Cason demonstrated their ability along burlesque lines. Sally Rice was another favorite.

3 BIG SCENES AT CASINO

THREE big scenes, colorful and fast-moving, together with a constant flow of wit and humor and the whole production dressed in splendor featured "High Heels" which opened yesterday at Waldron's Casino.

Chuck Wesson was the star of the production, while Joan Lee, a singing and dancing soubrette, won high honors among the feminine players

The big scenes were "The Lady of the Web," "Garden of Girls" and "On the Santa Fe Trail." Charles Cole, a tramp comedian, was the amusing comic, and with Ray King, worked with Wesson to keep the humor at high pitch.

BRITISH STAGE TROUPE'S BOW A SUCCESS

LIKE one of those ancient knives of beaten steel and lovely mosaic haft, employed by gentlefolk in the alternating arts of dining dalliance and death-dealing, is that master-work of 8 hakespeare's maturity, "Much Ado About Nothing," now lubricous, now tender, now tragic. Boston made much ado about the 300-odd-year-old near-tragic comedy at last night's opening by the players of the Stratford-Upon-Avon Company at the Hollis. Like one of those ancient Florentine knives, last night's opening piece glittered and rang and flashed its witticisms sparkled and occasionally pricked blood.

Mary Holder

Those in the audience whose mind-picture of Benedick recalled the nonchalance of our own Sothern met a surprise in the unostentatious seriousness of Wilfred Walter in the role. Convincingly he portrayed the successive phases of his transition from woman-scorner to rhyme-writing swain. Fabia Drake put into the role of Beatrice something which many an actress of greater fame has missed—humor. No shrew, this Beatrice, but a piquant, bubbling, fastidizing damosel who needed not the conniving of Benedick's friends, Claudio and Don Pedro, to enslave him to her charms.

In contrast to the rapier-like passes of the drama's gentry were the clownish scenes of Dogberry, Verges and their Constables' watch. Roy Byford was a droll rascal as the mumbling bungler of words who solemnly assures his princely superiors through the ages that comparisons are odorous.

The two lovers, Claudio and Hero, whose romance and mischance are the mainspring of the drama, spoke from the lips of George Hayes and Mary Holder. Of the splendid work of Eric Maxon as Don Pedro, Gordon Bailey as the sinister Don John, Kenneth Wicksteed and William Calvert as the brothers Leonato and Antonio, of the sprightly Dorothy Francis and Joyce Bland as the waiting women, Margaret and Ursula, there can also only be praise.

STATE'S FILM IS COMEDY SMASH

HUMOR at Loew's State this week is more effervescent than fizz-water out of a full-up siphon bottle. "The Girl Said No" might be called a yes-film for laughs. It has an excellent story, benefits by good direction, is well photographed and has a number of real performers in the cast. Its surprise is the fact that William Haines, nominal star who clowns along in his usual smart-Alec fashion, is almost swamped by the shining talent about him. Those who leave him far in the rear are Marie Dressler, always screamingly funny, Polly Moran, Francis X. Bushman, Jr., who does an outstanding job, and William V. Mong. As for Phyllis Crane, she makes a small part so lively one can be certain her future in filmdom is assured, and that she may be expected to forge rapidly ahead.

The picture shows Haines as a graduate up against his first struggles with the world of business and work—his first job, the death of his father and assumption of the responsibility of the family, his love, courtship and marriage—in fact, manhood coming of age.

'D. C. M.' at Copley

For the first time on any stage, Evelyn Glover's "D. C. M.," a play with World War background, was presented at the Copley last night. The principal characters were played by Elspeth Dudgeon, as ambitious mother, and Richard Whorf, a soldier boy hero. The play will be reviewed in Wednesday's Boston Evening American.

CHARGE SCHOOL GIRLS DRINK

Washington, March 25 (INS)—Startling charges that high school students were buying whiskey within a half mile of the capitol were being pondered by school authorities today. Some were girls.

Henry W. Lynn, street railway expert, testifying before the House district committee in opposition to a proposal to grant free car rides for school children, declared it would only give them more money to spend for whiskey, rouge and cigarettes.

Lynn told the committee he had personal knowledge of drinking by students at Eastern High school.

Man Freed After Dry Clubbing Story

Providence, March 25—Three prohibition agents who arrested Joseph Silva of South Attleboro at Valley Falls on March 12, clubbed him, threw him down and kicked him, according to Silva's testimony today before U. S. Commissioner Fred A. Otis.

Silva was found not guilty on a charge of possessing liquor. The raid was on the home of his mother-in-law on Carpenter st., and he said he was visiting there that day.

CANADA, U. S. IN RUM PACT

Ottawa, March 25 (AP)—Premier W. L. MacKenzie King has informed the House of Commons that Canada is negotiating with the United States for a treaty to suppress smuggling.

He said the object of the treaty was not only to stop liquor traffic but that it was designed to prevent all smuggling both ways.

The announcement came in the debate on the amendment to the export bill introduced by Mr. King for denying customs clearances to craft carrying liquor to the United States. The measure has passed its second reading.

It was made in answer to the statement of Dr. R. J. Manion, Conservative from Fort William, Ont., that in agreeing to prohibit liquor clearances Canada had "entered into a one-sided bargain with the United States." He said Canada had given something and should receive something in return.

CHICAGO GANGS RAISE BIG FUND

Chicago, March 25 (AP)—Today's Herald and Examiner said gangland was gathering a vast defense fund to combat the anti-crime drive of the "Secret Six."

The challenge of cash was immediately accepted by Col Robert Isham Randolph, president of the Chamber of Commerce and only known member of the committee known as the "Secret Six."

"If they can raise a million dollars we can raise two or three millions," he admonished.

The paper said the "defense fund" was to be used the first time in the trial of five alleged extortionists indicted for kidnaping and holding for ransom Theodore Kopeman, wealthy insurance broker.

JENNEY

Daring Story of Eternal Love Triangle

Ardeth Carroll, beauty, lives in the drab home of her Aunt Stella. Neil Burke, downstairs, claims Ardeth as his. She is uncertain. She yearns for a fuller life. Ardeth sees the man of her dreams, Ken Gleason. Neil is furiously jealous. Jeanette Parker, society girl, plans to use Ardeth in a scheme for revenge. She opens a shop and engages Ardeth to run it. Ardeth sees that she can never marry Neil. Ken comes to the shop and meets Ardeth. Both are secretly impressed. Sunday they spend on Ken's houseboat. Their first kiss. Then Ardeth becomes jealous of Cecilie, Jeanett's sister.

CHAPTER 16

IF Tom Corbett noticed Ardeth's agitation he gave no sign. His eyes had dropped to the trinket she was arranging on its satin cushion.

"What in the name of common sense is that?" he asked in astonishment. "A bunch of glass grapes?"

The girl drew a deep breath. Her tone took on protective lightness of manner. Golden eyes crinkling to smiles as she answered.

"You're an excellent guesser since that's what it's supposed to look like! They're each a tiny bottle of perfume. See—unscrew one from the rest of the cluster and you have a little dash of perfume. It's an imported novelty Jeanette picked up yesterday."

"Gosh—the trouble you women are in!" Tom's honest, square face looked blank.

She laughed——and he could never guess her mind was strained to the bubble in the back room.

"A different perfume to match different moods!" she said gaily. "It goes according to colors. When one feels joyful—take this amber grape. That perfume's Mountain Holiday. And if you're pensive—this orchid one—Faint Regrets, and if you feel the world is your oyster, here's this red one, Whoopee! And when you have a headache—or a heartache—or your rich uncle has just died left you nothing, you'll find consolation in this tender green—Never Mind."

"And you women keep that sort of truck on your minds along with your other troubles? Good Lord!"

"Oh, I don't think a woman with real troubles would remember she had this bunch of grapes!" Ardeth couldn't keep the bitterness out of her voice.

Something in the tone which raised the man's eyes to study that lovely averted face.

A gale of laughter came from the other room. "Cyril, you're priceless!" sounded Cecile's high clear voice. The inevitable Duvant "Not ree-ally!" echoed

Tom's light brown eyes became a little grim

"They're reading that Spy thing . . . you know, that scandalous weekly called 'The Spy?'"

"I saw Jeanette bring it in this morning," she answered.

Tom's square fingers tapped a tattoo on the top of the case. "Well named, isn't it? How can a thing like that flourish for years in a civilized community? Nobody likes it, and everybody reads it. Afraid they'll find some little dirty crack about themselves if they don't, I guess. Says just enough to smirch reputations and not quite enough so they can get the rotten sheet for libel. Wonder who's the garbage collector who reports the tit-bits, anyway?"

"Like an assassin—striking in the dark, isn't it?" Hot color ran to Ardeth's cheeks. It was suddenly indicative of them, those perfumed, sophisticated women smoking and chatting scandal. And Ken—with his breezy out-of-door air, his frank smile—sitting beside Cecile . . .

Tom's admiring eyes fastened on her. "Pretty kid . . ." ran his thoughts. "And sweet, too . . . Nice, steady way she looked at a fellow . . ."

The dream stretched through the days, yet now, beneath was a vague fear like a beating of wings. Only when she was with Ken did it still! There was a measure of anxiety in her manner now, something wistful in the hazel eyes when they silently searched the man's face. She had a breathless sense that the time was drawing short. The time for what . . . ?

Each day she saw him was another precious pearl added to the string. Noon hours when he would be loitering by the flowerstand at the corner. His tall, slim figure—white smile flashing in the warm tan of his face. Hurrying to her through the sunshine. Grasping her elbow with a teasing "Woman, I'm starved—for you!"

Why did they keep these sacred meetings secret? Later Ardeth recognized this as the tribute she paid the fear—the fear which beat her happiness like wings.

So long as nothing definite was said to break the spell, the dream went on. Nothing definite between them . . . nothing to struggle for—or against. Just the sweet security of knowing she would see him some time during the day with-

Harvard Man Finds Love Paradise

HAVING MANY WIVES GIVES HIGH RANK

Mothers-in-Law Are Gagged and There Is No Divorce in Northern Australia

A land where the divorcee and the old maid are unknown, and where a man and his somther-in-law are forbidden by tribal law to speak to one another has been found by W. Lloyd Warner, who has recently completed some anthropological research for the Roosevelt Foundation in northern Australia.

Warner spent two periods of nine months each among the aborigines, many of whom had never before seen a white man. He found the people friendly and intelligent and in stature very nearly like the white race. These savages he believes to be intellectually like Americans, the difference being in the mental equipment they acquire. While civilization abandoned the stone age and arrived at the steel age, they stayed where they were.

The people live very simply, the men hunting and dancing and carrying on the tribal religious rites from which the women and young boys are entirely barred, and the women spend their time gathering the native plants such as nuts, roots and lily bulbs, which with meat make up their diet.

MORE WIVES THE MERRIER

Life to the women of this brown race is rather difficult at times. Polygamy is practiced very successfully by these simple people, so that divorce and unmarried daughters are unknown. As a man's place in society is dependent upon the number of kinships he possesses, a great number of wives is of considerable convenience to him and increases his importance in the tribe.

"The usual number of wives a husband possesses is two or three," said Mr. Warner, "although one of my friends had 17. As a consequence, he was a man of considerable importance since he had a large number of sons and daughters to marry off.

Although the ratio of births among these people is about 50-50, so many fearless young warriors between the ages of 17 and 30 are killed off that the practice of having more than one wife is a necessity, to take care of the surplus.

WISDOM HOOD BRIEF

The girls wed very young, thereby ensuring to the brown-skinned Don Juan that no man from another tribe can run off with his bride while he is stalling around and waiting for her to grow up. This because a man and a woman are usually destined before birth to marry because of their relationship.

The oldest girl in a family, therefore, is always married first and her younger sisters know that by the law of the tribe when they grow up they will also be given as wives to their older sisters husband. When a husband dies the wife is given to the man's younger brother and is added to his collection of wives.

Warner brought back a considerable collection of spears and totems. They are being catalogued now and will shortly be on view for the public at the Peabody Museum of Comparative Zoology at Harvard

E. H. S. Reunion Monday

The 11th annual reunion and banquet of the class of 1919 of Boston English high school will be held next Monday, March 24, at the Elks Hotel.

Collection of native totems and spear thrower brought by Prof. W. Lloyd Warner of Harvard from the wilds of Australia. These and many of the other articles obtained by him are to be exhibited for the public inspection at the Peabody Museum. The fish totem at left is used in religious ceremonies.

Prof. Warner holding two of the savages' fighting weapons. The larger one is a boomerang which, when thrown, completes a circle and returns to the thrower. The sharp instrument is a bird-headed club to deal an enemy a death blow, the native explained to Prof. Warner.

RAPS WILSON AT TAXICAB HEARING

Rep. Finnegan Charges Police Head Is Unfair to Honest Men; Demands New Deal

Police Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson was roundly scored today at a hearing before the legislative committee on cities, by Rep. Joseph Finnegan of Dorchester, who said Wilson's policy in the taxicab situation was one of consistent discrimination against honest men trying to make a living

Finnegan also denounced the attempt of a special commission of legislators from outside Boston to solve the problem, and urged transfer of control of cabs to the City Council, adding

"The majority party in this state doesn't look any too good now with respect to control of the police situation, and may look worse before the present inquiry (the Garrett probe) is finished.

Before Finnegan spoke, Senator George G. Moyse of Waltham, chairman of the special commission that looked into Boston's taxi problem, urged legislation along the lines of the commission's majority report

WOULD PENALIZE HOTELS

Moyse advocated drastic punishment for hotels and railroads that accept payment from taxicab companies for the privilege of operating stands on railroad property, and declared against "using police as cops for private gain."

Finnegan, however, declared that the legislation urged by Moyse would only perpetuate the present situation, because the police would still grant permits for stands.

"I am convinced that Commissioner Wilson doesn't want to be fair in the taxicab situation and doesn't want legislation that would compel him to be fair," said the Dorchester representative.

"He is willing to catch at any straw to defeat public stand legislation. His attitude toward drivers and members of the large cab corporations is one of unjust discrimination."

FOR OPEN STANDS

Finnegan urged stands open to all cabs, regardless of ownership, and was supported by Harry Wiseman, editor of a motor magazine; George H. Maymie, treasurer of the I. T. O. A.; Abraham Miller, I. T. O. A. driver, and Joseph H. Bourke, past president of that organization

Boucher charged that $250,000 yearly was being paid by cab companies for stand privileges in hotels and railroads. Moyse asserted that open stands would mean gang warfare as in New York, which others denied.

John J. Hurley, secretary to Commissioner Wilson, favored a bill along the lines of the special commission's majority report, while Senator Parkman D. Howe favored one drawn along lines of the minority report.

"Cruising" by empty taxis, according to Senator Moyse, was the chief trouble and a big factor in Boston's downtown traffic congestion which he figured costs business men $1,000 a day. He reiterated his recommendation for more licensed cab stands in the downtown area.

2700 CABS IN BOSTON

He also recommended limiting the number of taxis in Boston to 3000, and estimated the present number at 2700.

Regarding punishment for hotels and railroads violating his proposed statute, he said, by putting all cab concerns on a free competitive basis and granting the privilege in each case to the company providing the best service.

There were 574 traffic violations recorded against taxi drivers in a little less than a year, said Moyse, placing the blame chiefly on the cruising practice.

A checkup on "cruisers" was made, he asserted, and one cab with a license to maintain a stand in the Back Bay, was found circling a certain downtown block 65 times in three days, always empty.

EVERETT WILL SPEND $300,000

In order to relieve unemployment the Everett board of aldermen, last night, voted an appropriation of $300,000 for street improvements. The order for the appropriation was submitted and urged by Mayor Michael C. O'Neill.

The board also confirmed the appointment of James T. McNeil as city auditor for a term of three years.

The lobby floor of the Everett City Hall, where the meeting of the board of aldermen was held, was condemned by Building Inspector John L. Noel during the meeting

Because of the condition of the building, an old structure, the floor which is on the second, has sunk six inches in the past few days, making it unsafe, according to the inspector. Efforts to secure appropriations for the repair or erection of a new City Hall have failed in the past.

WOMAN'S ESTRANGED HUSBAND TRIES TO SAVE HER FROM PRISON

WIFE HELD AS PASSER OF BAD BILLS

Jamaica Plain Man Finds Her Without Lawyer and No Money to Hire One

Life's darkest moment was made brighter for Mrs. Gladys Furlong, 23, alleged passer of counterfeit money, today when her estranged husband, having read of her arrest, went to her side and began a fight to save her from jail.

Mrs. Furlong had appeared in court without a lawyer, with no funds to hire one and with no prospect of raising bail, when her husband, Nicholas T. Furlong, 26, of Verona st., Jamaica Plain, a telegraph operator, arrived.

Their reconciliation was accompanied by tears on the part of the girl wife. Furlong then tried to have the $10,000 bail reduced, without success, and started out to find a lawyer, his wife's case being postponed meanwhile.

According to secret service agents, a dozen Greater Boston storekeepers have failed to identify Mrs. Furlong as one who passed spurious $10 bills on them, but she is charged with passing a bad bill in Jamaica Plain Saturday.

Government officials said they believe she and a 22-year-old youth, James DePena of Cooper st., North End, also arrested in Jamaica Plain, were passers for the same gang, the leaders of which are undiscovered. Special Officer George Bates of Station 13 was responsible for both arrests.

GRASS FIRES SWEEP OVER STATE

Rain Today Expected to Check Flames; Volunteer Fireman Dies at Cheshire

Rain today held out hope of checking grass and brush fires all over the state which caused one death and left a trail of exhausted firemen.

John Clancy, 70, of Cheshire, fell dead while serving as a volunteer fireman there. Flames swept over nearly 500 acres in Lexington.

About 800 acres in an outlying section of Springfield were burned over. Several sheds were destroyed, the loss being about $700. The entire damage was placed at $5000. Fanned by a stiff breeze, the fire was still burning early tonight.

The Leominster department, aided by 40 volunteers, spent most of the day extinguishing a series of grass fires.

Around Pittsfield, the brush fires were particularly menacing.

Although Billerica had 12 fires of its own, it sent apparatus to Lexington when a call for help was received.

Woburn also had its quota of brush fires, but still was able to help Lexington.

Large tracts were blackened around Concord.

TOWNS IGNORE ACT TO AID JOBLESS

Have Failed to Take Advantage of Suspension of Civil Service Rules

Cities and towns have not as yet taken advantage of the law suspending for 60 days the civil service rules and regulations regarding employment of laborers on public works, although the law has been in operation for eight days, it was stated today.

The law was passed as a result of a special message to Governor Allen, who had been informed that the civil service rules and regulations did not allow cities and towns to select from the list laborers with dependents. The purpose of the act was to make it possible to give preference to married men and others with dependents in the present era of unemployment.

John J. Walsh chairman of the civil service board of the American Legion, called upon the state civil service commission to suggest that his organization would aid in every way possible in the determination of dependency, and was informed of the failure of municipalities to avail themselves of the act.

"In other words," said Walsh, "despite the representations made to the governor and the legislature that public works operations were handicapped by the civil service rules, no municipality has availed itself of the opportunity to put laborers with dependents to work during the first eight days that the law has been in operation."

The civil service commissioner informed Walsh that immediately upon the receipt of requisitions for laborers in cities and towns, the department will mail letters to the men on the eligible list asking if they have dependents and how many. This information will have to be given by the laborer over his own signature and a penalty will be imposed for making a false statement. Walsh was assured also that all veterans on the list will be canvassed before non-veterans are contacted.

SUSPECTS HELD IN DOG RACKET

Charlestown police suspect a new racket in the arrest of William Duarte, 32, and Arthur Smith, 34, both of New York city, in a pet store on Bunker Hill st., Charlestown, after a Malden druggist had reported that two men in a New York State car picked up a dog in the street.

The dog, a Boston terrier worth $150, later was found to be the property of Eldridge Cook of 66 Upham st., Malden. A second, a fox terrier found in the car, also worth $150, had not been claimed last night.

Smith, who conducts a pet store in New York, told police he bought the fox terrier in Saugus, and had a photograph of the dog in his pocket. He said Cook's dog jumped into the car as it was passing through Malden.

NEW COMET IN VIEW TONIGHT

Usually one must be an early riser to see a comet, especially if the celestial wanderer has just been discovered.

But the newest wayfarer, reported by a Polish observer only last Friday, is visible in the west, to the naked eye. It may be seen around 7 p. m. today, and although hardly looking it, this comet boasts a tail longer than the moon is thick through.

Harvard astronomers, after a careful check on the visitor's wanderings, say the best time to observe the comet is between 7 and 8 p. m.

Face directly west and look gradually upward. If you can pick out the constellation of Aries, you will have little difficulty in spotting the comet, for it is just underneath Aries, moving sidewise, and northward toward Cassiopeia.

She told police that she had left school and was walking along Center st., Roxbury, on her way home, when an automobile drew up to the curbing near her. She said a man, whom she described as a negro, alighted, and, as he did so, a dollar bill fell from one of his pockets.

Lured by the sight of the bill she went to pick it up, she said, but as she stooped she was suddenly grasped and hurled into the auto mobile. Before she could scream a gag was clasped over her mouth and nose and she drifted into unconsciousness.

Four hours later she regained consciousness and found herself lying on the sidewalk in Seaver pl.

POLL SHOWS HARVARD STUDENTS ARE OPPOSED TO DRY LAW

VOTE WILL BE REVEALED THURSDAY

Tabulation of Ballots Is Expected to Bare Many Interesting Facts

It leaked out today—if it wasn't known already—that Harvard students are in a majority against the 18th amendment, although official announcement of the vote being taken will not be made until Thursday.

Graduate school students voted today, while undergraduates cast their ballot yesterday, and in connection with the latter the Crimson, college daily, made this naive statement:

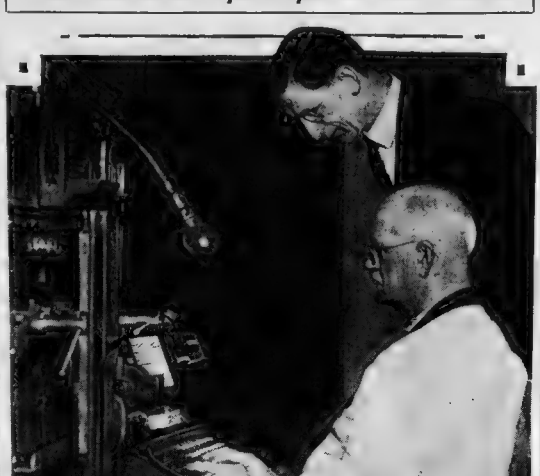
"Partial tabulation of the first returns indicates that, although the percentage of drinkers at Harvard approximates that of other eastern universities, interesting revelations as to why non-drinkers are abstainers will be possible when the final analysis of the vote is made."

All of which must mean that Harvard is on the "anti" side of the fence, for other eastern universities, including M. I. T., Brown, Yale, Amherst, Rutgers and Williams have gone "wringwet" in similar polls.

Those conducting the vote at Harvard for the Crimson expected to have twice as many ballots cast today as were tossed into the boxes yesterday when the total was 1200.

Voting took place at Harvard and Sever Halls in the yard, Langdell hall at the Law school, Pierce hall for engineering students, at the dining halls for the Business school and at Vanderbilt hall for future doctors.

De Valera an Apt Pupil at New Game



Eamonn de Valera, Irish Republican leader, observed the technical side of the making of a newspaper during his visit to the Boston Evening American today. Here he is looking at a linotype machine in action. De Valera is here to raise the balance of $1,000,000 for a newspaper in Dublin. At present $525,000 has been subscribed. (Staff photo.)

DE VALERA SEES AMERICAN PLANT

Tells of Ideas That Will Govern His Newspaper in Ireland

Selecting the Boston Evening American as the Hub newspaper plant to study, Eamon De Valera, Irish Republican leader, made a tour of the American in connection with establishment of a newspaper in Dublin.

The Irish newspaper will be published by the Irish Press, Ltd., as soon as De Valera and his associates raise the balance of $1,000,000 necessary.

A total of $525,000 has been raised in Ireland and thus far $160,000 has been raised in the United States.

De Valera, who has inspected big newspaper plants in various parts of the country, expressed a wish to inspect the Boston Evening American plant. He was taken through the building and showed chief interest in the up-to-date presses whose speed in delivery make it possible to fill the enormous circulation demands daily.

HIS SLOGAN ACCURACY

"It is a magnificent outfit," said De Valera when the tour was over. "Of course we do not expect to do things on such a large scale, but we want to follow the most modern lines.

"We expect to have a circulation of about 100,000 for our morning edition, and we will have an evening edition and one on Sunday also.

"The newspaper we plan is to give the news accurately without any attempt to color it or bias it for party purposes.

"In the editorial columns we will advocate, politically, the right of our people to have whatever form of government and institutions they themselves want, free from all dictation or control.

JOBS FOR EVERYBODY

"Economically we shall support the policy of organizing ourselves industrially so as to become self-supplying as far as possible.

"Our social policy will include asserting the right that every citizen who is able and willing to work is entitled to be given the opportunity for work.

"Culturally, we shall aim at fostering our own language and developing it, fostering our own music and preserving our own tradition—the things that have made us a separate nation."

For the newspaper, a site has been purchased—the old Tivoli Theater in Dublin, near O'Connell bridge, the building in which once was located Daniel O'Connell's conciliation hall.

Smoking in Bed Causes $800 Fire

When a fire broke out on the third floor of a three-story brick apartment house in Cortez pl., South End, early today, 4 dozy lodgers were driven to the street and scores of roomers in adjacent houses were aroused by the crackling of the flames, many of whom dressed and went outdoors.

According to police of the La Grange st. station, the fire started in a room on the top floor as a result of a lodger smoking in bed. The loss was estimated at $800.

Hilmer F. Larson, 43, of Boston, today was held in $10,000 bonds for grand jury action, upon the complaint in East Cambridge court of an elderly woman who charged him with embezzlement of nearly $7000, all her savings.

Alma L. Nelson said she had loaned the money to the man, who had represented himself as soon to inherit money from rich uncle and aunts.

Wallace L. Wilcox of Providence, R. I., the oldest Franklin dealer in the country, presented a moving picture projector to make complete the camera outfit.

Thought $3 Per Week Too Much for Wife; Must Pay $5

Mrs. Margaret J. O'Reilly of Hudson, whose husband, she testified, wrote her that $3 a week was too much money for any woman to have, was awarded separate support at $5 a week in a decree handed down by Judge Charles N. Harris in Middlesex Probate Court.

The 66-year-old bride of a year testified last week that her husband, James G. O'Reilly, 69, wrote her that what she wanted was "a cash register rather than a husband." The letter, introduced in evidence, read in part, "You say I don't support you. You have $3 a week. That is $156 a year, and that's too much money for any woman to have."

400 Workers Start Y.M.C.A. Fund Drive

Under the leadership of William J. Davidson, 400 workers began campaigning to raise $146,976 for the B. Y. M. C. A.

Business depression and unemployment should be no bar to the raising of this fund, Davidson told the campaigners at the initial dinner in the Huntington ave. branch last night. Davidson is president of the New England division of the A. & P. Company.

TWO STRICKEN WITH 'BENDS'

For the first time in several years two men were afflicted with "bends," or caisson disease, today in Boston. It is caused by compressed air getting into the blood.

They are John Flynn, 31, and Leo Gaffney, 40, both of 115 Mountfort st. Back Bay, employed by the Gow Construction Co., in foundation work for a new building at Dorchester ave. and Broadway.

Working in a compressed air chamber, Gaffney was first stricken, and after treatment at the company's first aid station at South and Kneeland sts. he was taken home. A short time later Flynn was afflicted and after first aid was taken to City Hospital.

Canada Will Bar U. S. Unemployed

The refusal of the Canadian authorities last Saturday to allow 23 Americans from Connecticut and New York to enter Canada is due to a strenuous effort on the part of the Canadian government to save Canada from the undesirable effects of unemployment.

According to James M. Stahl, inspector-in-charge of Canadian immigration at this port, no American seeking employment in Canada will be allowed to cross the border at the present time.

MARSINO FREE, REARRESTED

Having served three years of a five-year sentence, Joseph B. Marsino was today released from state's prison at Charlestown. He was immediately rearrested by Deputy Sheriff George H. Raner of Worcester County, where a two-year sentence awaits him on charges of larceny.

Accompanying Marsino was his attorney, Peter V. Maggio of Everett, who stated that the sentence at Worcester would be vacated, and that Marsino would then go to Buffalo, N. Y., to face larceny charges pending against him there.

Marsino, was convicted for larceny of $213,000 from the First National Bank of Warren, Mass in 1923. He was sentenced to Atlanta, penetentary and later transferred to state prison.

2 SURRENDER IN $1300 THEFT

Left stranded far from home by two girls who took their money, according to their story to the police, Charles Palmer, 18, and James Keohane, 20, both of Roxbury, drove their machine until the gas ran out and wandered about for two days without food or lodging.

They finally surrendered to the police of Warrenton, Mo., asking that they be sent back to Boston to face trial for larceny.

The two youths arrived here in custody of Special Officers George W. Gardner and William Britt of the LaGrange st. station. They will be charged with larceny of $1300 from a truck of Altes & Fisher, Inc., on March 3. Palmer lives at 15 Orange ct. and Keohane at 1527 Washington st.

Dr. Sturgis Gains in Fight for Life

Considerable hope is now entertained for the recovery of Dr. Walter H. Sturgis of Hull, according to a report today by his physician, Dr. John Sweeney, to Mrs. Sturgis.

Dr. Sturgis has been ill for a week with heart trouble aggravated by hiccoughs, and firemen, whom he often aided at all hours of the day and night, have been working in relays with inhalators to save him.

The hiccoughs which stopped yesterday as he fell into a deep sleep did not recur with his awakening and today he had been ten hours without a sign of them. Use of the inhalator and oxygen tanks was unnecessary for the first time, although the faithful firemen were ready if needed.

Roxbury B. C. Club to Hear Fr. Lyons

Curley Removes His Shamrock Shutters—to Be Painted

Motorists driving through Jamaicaway were astounded today to discover that the famous shamrock shutters on the home of Mayor James M. Curley were missing.

The mayor's recent conference with Eamon De Valera was immediately recalled, and much speculation resulted, together with considerable conjecture.

A report came to the office of the Boston American and a reporter was assigned to the story. He discovered that the famous shutters were merely in a paint-shop regaining their pristine glory, and will be back in place in 10 days.

Warm Weather to Remain Few Days

The warmth that arrived today is due to remain for a while, according to the weather bureau, with possible showers tonight and tomorrow. Unsettled weather, with considerable rain and snow, prevails over the entire country east of the Rockies. The temperature this afternoon was well up in the forties here.

Chicago, March 25 (AP)—Winter whipped spring backwards today before a gale of snow that tingled the midwest. The blast gripped Chicago, Detroit, St. Louis and Indianapolis.

DRY SHOWDOWN UP TO DRAPER

Declaring that Republicans wish to know the stand of all candidates on the prohibition question, former Speaker of the House Joseph Walker sent a letter today to Eben S. Draper, candidate for the Republican nomination for senator, asking that he make his position public.

Two questions were propounded by former Speaker Walker.

"Do you favor the repeal of the 18th amendment?

Do you favor the repeal of the Massachusetts "Baby Volstead Act," so-called?

Commenting on the letter, the Liberal Civic League, Inc., said today:

"Inasmuch as Mr. Butler (former Senator William M. Butler) has assumed leadership of the bone-dry Republicans in his candidacy for the Republican U. S. senatorial nomination, it is quite natural that the Republicans throughout the State should look to Mr. Draper for a clear-cut outline of his position on prohibition."

Ice May Be Melted at Garden Tonight

FIRE and brimstone may melt the ice at the Garden this evening, when the Bruins and Maroons play the third and "last" game of their gold series to prove something—the boys have been swinging sticks with all the ardor of ancient knights wielding their decapitators—and with results almost as deadly—the Bruins, when they came back looked as if they had been inhaling machine gun bullets.

The Maroons were bloody, but unbowed, claiming they had several good socks left before passing out of the picture—the Boston champs want to get even for the things that were done to them up above—they will have the crowd with 'em, and officials unconsciously are swayed by the yowling of the mob up in Canada, the Maroons were allowed to get away with plenty, according to the veracious experts—here, at home, the Bruins will have more chance to rough things than would be possible on an allen ice —hockey rules, of course, are supposed to prevent the raw stuff but in these tense games the boys have a habit of going in for butcher business—it's all wrong according to the pure sport code but the mere possibility of trouble has built up the greatest demand for tickets this village has known —the boys and girls, who can, will all go down hoping that nobody is knocked silly; hoping, also, that if anybody is, it will not be a Bruin

HOCKEY is the most rugged sport left. Another year or so and we'll have a commission to take the murderous side out of it. Which will not hurt the game, at that. It's a wonder nobody has been killed in the desperate skirmishes of the past two years.

Big Year Ahead for Canoe Clubs

THIS will be a large season in canoeing, a sport that has grown remarkably popular in these parts the last few years. The American Canoe Association will celebrate its 50th anniversary, and the Boston branch of the organization will run the celebration. They started well by arranging for the ceremonies at Sugar Island, one of the Thousand, up in Ontario.

Louis Stoughton Drake of Newton is the commodore of the body, which has 1500 members throughout the United States and Canada. He was a champion in the old days and for 20 years never was defeated. He gave the club an island down in Lake Quinsigamond for its own, and the parties held there invariably are what you might call real takeins.

Bancroft Goodwin, also of Newton, is secretary-treasurer, and all the officials for the big paddle hall from these parts. Which will make the affair a success, for from personal observation, we realize that visitors from Massachusetts know just what should be done and how to do it, in Canada

PRIMO CARNERA is going to make a picture. It will, naturally, be a panorama.

Eckersall Was Greatest of Quarterbacks

DID you know that Walter Eckersall was the greatest of all quarterbacks; he twice kicked four field goals in a big game—that he was considered much the best official in the Middle West—that soccer fans seldom storm the gates when the admission price goes up to the baseball scale—that the boxing probe will not mean a thing, hearsay evidence and imagination never counting—that the Scott-Stribling thing in jolly old London will be terrible; Phil can't fight, and Willie won't—that the Bruins could have sold 50,000 seats for tonight's game; and doubled the prices, without getting any kick—that new rookies have caught on with the big league clubs this spring than has been the case for at least 10 years—that the Earl of Derby may come to see the Kentucky Derby; and look at a great hoss. Flying Heels—that Capt. McEwen will be immensely popular at Holy Cross; and uphold all Crusader grid traditions.

FRED HOEY, the baseball broadcaster, has turned out a nifty souvenir program for this p. m.'s hockey explosion. Fred was one of the pioneers of the game in this frenzied sector, and knows his back handers and body shots. Also his biography and history.

Doeg Captures Title

St. Augustine, Fla., March 25 John Doeg, Santa Monica, Cal., defeated J. Gilbert Hall, South Orange, N. J., 5—7, 6—3, 3—6, 6—3, 7—5, to win the southeastern tennis championship.

By BILL GRIMES

DURING its two seasons as a hockey arena, the Boston Garden has been the scene of many thrilling battles; but all performances of the past will fade from the memory of the most rabid fan, after tonight's clash between the Bruins and Maroons in the third game of their championship series.

The Bruins came through with two victories in Montreal last week, but they were badly mauled by the Maroons during those games. Without an exception every Bruin carried home bruises from the tussles in the Canadian metropolis. They were instructed to stay on the ice in Montreal regardless of the actions of their opponents. Although they received more than their share of penalties, the Bruins played as ordered, but it is doubtful if either Pres. C. Adams or Manager Art Ross will be able to hold them in check tonight.

In all probability, the Maroons left the brand of hockey they played in the first and, especially, the second games, in Montreal. The Bruins never have objected to a protested game, but they protested against hard, rugged hockey, but no team can be expected to stand for the treatment they received last week. Lionel Hitchman and Eddie Shore were the targets of the Maroons, but in getting to the Bruin defense men, the Montrealers seldom overlooked an opportunity to cut down other Bostonians.

Game Tonight May Develop into Free-for-All

If the Maroons go after the Bruins as they did last Saturday there is going to be trouble tonight. The Bruins are more over the treatment they received and unless or no orders they intend to protect themselves.

Also, there are several of personal feuds to be settled this evening. The Maroons knew that Hitchman was playing with a fractured jaw and broken nose first period of the opening game was over, he had been cracked over by Lionel Conacher and Smith, and in a mix up with Trottier, for which Hitchman takes the blame, admitted that it was while ducking under Trottier's arm that he crashed against the Maroon defenseman.

Smith and Trottier did a job on Hitchman in the second game and the Bruin captain is anything but this type of player to allow himself to be assaulted with a comeback.

Bill Carson, the scrappy little center, is one Bruin who will be dangerous, and this will be especially true if Trottier makes the mistake of trying to give him the business. Carson went after Trottier after the latter had spilt Hitchman for a couple of stitches on Saturday, and did a fine job on his former varsity teammate.

As soon as Hitchman was dropped by Trottier, Carson raced across the ice and shaking his finger in Trottier's face, told the Mt'oon plenty. Carson is small but there are few tricks he has not mastered, and he is seldom selected by opponents to be the recipient of any rough stuff

Like every hockey club, the Maroons as a whole and she are rough, but in fairness to them,

Court Tennis Star Will Play Here

Pierre Etchebaster, French court tennis champion and probably the greatest court tennis player in the world, will play an exhibition match with Harry Thompson in the Tennis and Racquet Club Saturday afternoon.

Siebert, Trottier and Smith, stellar members of the Montreal Maroons who play the Bruins in the third game of the playoff series tonight in the Garden, are due for a torrid evening if they try to hump the local players around as they did in the two games at Montreal. While the Bruins will not provoke trouble, the players are determined to retaliate in kind if the Maroons start any roughness. Fans should see plenty of action.

Trafton Next Foe of Giant Carnera

Kansas City, March 25 (AP)—Primo Carnera, 270-pound man mountain from Italy, today continued training for tomorrow night's 10-round bout with George Trafton, former Chicago football professional. Carnera is favored to win.

Carnera has surprised fans with speed and grace shown in preliminary workouts with Jack Dunn, a middleweight, and Buck Weaver, Kansas heavyweight. He twice half-pushed, half-knocked Weaver through the ropes.

Trafton, conqueror of Art Sarsfield, pugilistic erstwhile first baseman of the Chicago White Sox, has been content with less ambitious training sessions. He has been trouble, however, in his declarations that he was "going right after the Italian."

"Carnera can't keep me from hitting him, and if I get him down he stays," he decla...

Walter Eckersall, Grid Hero, Dead

Chicago March 25—Walter Eckersall, former all-around athlete and more recently a noted sports official and writer, died suddenly here in a down-town hotel.

Eckersall, one of the greatest football players the game has ever known, was 43 years old. He had been ailing for some time.

Eckersall's athletic career began here 25 years ago at Hyde Park high school, where he was as famed in prep school circles as he later became in college sports. He was best known for his football exploits, but excelled also in track, baseball and ice skating. Basketball was unknown at the time

LEWIS TO TAKE ON SHERRY

Ed "Strangler" Lewis, former heavyweight champion of the wrestling world and still one of the greatest of all wrestlers, will return to a local ring a week from Thursday night, when he will tackle Jack Sherry, champion of Ohio, in the feature finish match of Paul Bowser's all-star tournament at the Arena.

Early this season Promoter Bowser promised he would present the greatest series of wrestling shows ever staged in the East, and he has lived up to his promises emphatically. The result has been that wrestling is in the midst of one of the most successful seasons it has had.

Another great outpouring of fans is expected a week from Thursday night. Lewis ranks second only to Sonnenberg as a drawing card, and Sherry is looked upon as one of the best young wrestlers in the country.

Three weeks ago Henri Diglane was largely unknown Now as a result of his great match with Gus Sonnenberg, he is famous. Diglane won the right to meet Sonnenberg by defeating Sherry after two hours and four minutes of wrestling in the Arena, and Sherry is out to emulate Diglane and prove his right to be ranked with the Frenchman and Sonnenberg and Lewis

Bob "Bibber" McCoy popular Cambridge heavyweight, will start a campaign which he hopes will lead him to a return match with Sonnenberg by meeting Joe Malcewicz, Utica Panther, in the semi-final match

McCoy looks like the best young prospect on the horizon, and he will be opposed to a seasoned veteran who knows every trick of the wrestling game. The Malcewicz-Count Zarynoff bout of last week was one of the most sensational contests of the year, but the burly McCoy and his slim Malcewicz are expected to produce an equally thrilling battle.

Miss Morrill in Badminton Final

Marjorie Morrill advanced to the final of the women's singles district championship badminton tournament when she defeated Mrs. George W. Wichtman in a semifinal match at the University Club by scores of 11—8, 7—11, 11—6. By her victory, Miss Morrill earned the right to play Mrs. J. B. Pierce, who has already reached the final round in the other half of the draw.

Introducing Red Sox Rookies

THOMAS OLIVER

THOMAS OLIVER, who is expected to be one of the regular Red Sox outfielders this season, was secured via the waiver route from the Athletics, who drafted him from Little Rock.

Thomas Oliver

He is just 24 years old having been born on January 13, 1906, but he weighs 168 pounds and is 6 feet, 1 inches in height. He hits and throws right-handed. Last season, with Little Rock, he led the Southern Association in hits with 216, and was fifth among the batsmen with an average of .336.

He is a remarkable fielder, is very fast and has a great arm.

He broke in at Laurel, Miss., in 1923, and saw service in Monroe, La.; Shreveport, La.; Decatur, Ill.; Nashville, Tenn.; Beaumont, Texas, and with the Vernon and Mission clubs in California before reaching Little Rock.

Bob Quinn offered $10,000 and two players for him last season, but the offer was turned down. The Sox "prexy" later got him for the waiver price of $4000.

Al Friedman Loses to Marty Gallagher

Baltimore, Md., March 24 (AP)—Marty Gallagher, Washington heavyweight, tonight was given the decision over Al Friedman of Boston in their 10-round bout here. One judge favored Friedman and the other judge and referee Gallagher. Gallagher weighed 199 and Friedman 184.

Revere Ramblers Win Hoop Title

The Revere Ramblers won the city basketball championship when they defeated the Mysteries 34 to 25 Walsh and White did the heavy scoring for the winners. Salinsky the star player of the Mysteries, failed to show to his usual form.

RISKO DEFEATS CAMPOLO

New York, March 25 (AP)—Johnny Risko, whether or not he ever climbs very high on the heavyweight championship ladder, still is the giant-killer of the prizering. Nevertheless, in the main event of a benefit card at Madison Square Garden last night, the pudgy Cleveland baker-boy needed some assistance from the charitable spirit of the occasion to take a close decision from his big Argentine rival, Victorio Campolo.

Risko was given an unanimous victory over Campolo after 10 bruising rounds. The Argentine, to a vast majority of fans as well as spectators, appeared to have a substantial margin on points

Referee Arthur Donovan decided the issue by voting for Risko, the two judges were split, Charles F. Mehlhorn voting for Campolo and George Patrick for Risko.

A crowd of 11,000 booed the verdict lustily.

Referee Donovan indicated he was strongly swayed in his decision by the tactics of Campolo. He threatened to disqualify Victorio in the seventh round.

Green Nine Begins to Take Shape

Hanover, N. H., March 25—Dartmouth's baseball team seems to be taking shape as it enters its last week of pre-season practice. Up to the present, Coach Tesreau has been handicapped by a very large squad and a limited working place. An effort is being made to get the team out on the diamond sometime this week, but the typical cold spring of Hanover has retarded the work somewhat.

The infield has been narrowed down so that the first men may be selected. Barber and Clough are at first, Dabrowski and Pettengall at second, Rolfe and Burch at short, and Jeremiah and Eagan at third.

Poet to Try Luck as Wrestler

Providence, R. I., March 25—Bert Shurtleff, poet, magazine writer and football player, will try a new line when he grapples Al Thomas of Boston as a 15-minute time limit preliminary to match between "Dynamite" Gus Sonnenberg and "Panther" Joe Malcewicz at the North Main Street Auditorium Wednesday night.

If Shurtleff can toss Thomas in 15 minutes he will qualify for a more important bout against a better known opponent later.

Eagle Players Are Hitting Ball Hard

Due to the presence of three sophomores in the infield, Boston College may be weak on the defensive this spring.

But it seems certain that the Eagles will have another powerful offensive on the baseball machine which Coach Hugh Duffy is assembling daily at University Heights.

Coach Hugh Duffy had a chance to see his boys for the first time at bat and feels a lot better today. In fact, Coach Duffy has a feeling that this year's B. C. diamond outmond in Boston. So he will have the cheers and encouragement of his Hub friends to help him if he stays in the position he filled so well last season with the Tepes group.

The question will be whether a possible little extra hitting power will be worth a sacrifice of some degree of fielding ability. The struggle between the two will be good to watch.

Joe Bratcher, draftee from Denver, did not enjoy the boat trip to Bradenton. He was sick during the ride on the rather rickety boat. Some one later told Joe that the Braves would make their trip to New York this summer by way of the New York boat. Joe drawled back: "Never you mind. This heah Texan is stayin' on dry land after this."

Braves and Yanks Meet Today in Final Game

This afternoon the Braves play the Yankees at Waterford Park in their final game of the year. Bruce Cunningham and Percy Jones or Bob Brown are to work on the Hill today.

Al Spohrer has been confined to his room. A sore throat and slight chest cold flattened the mainstay catcher of the Braves. Al was up and around today, but is not likely to play this p. m.

Boxer Dies From Blow to Stomach

Tacoma, Wash., March 25 (AP)—Counted out by a boxing referee as he slipped to the canvas, Frank Farmer, 30-year-old lumberman fighter died in the ring last night from what a deputy coroner said was a blow in the stomach.

Farmer, veteran of about 350 ring battles, was counted out by the referee before anyone was aware that he was in a serious condition.

Efforts to revive the boxer were futile. A physician was called and Farmer was pronounced dead.

NEWTON BOY MUST HIT HARDER

By BILL CONNELL

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 25—Billy Rhiel and Fred Maguire will put up a great fight for the regular berth at second base on this year's edition of the Boston Braves.

Rhiel, who has clicked off nine hits in his last 24 times at bat, seems to have the edge on smiling Fred of Newton with the willow. That string of base blows gives Rhiel an average of .540 That rating is probably double the mark which Rhiel, new member of the tribe could hit during the playing season. The young Tribesman is a .300 hitter, however, under favorable conditions.

Bill Connell

He hit a bet better than .290 with the Robins last year, but he was not playing his best ball with that club Rhiel liked his teammates, but very much disliked playing in Brooklyn and so was not up to his top form during the campaign of 1929.

The playing of Rhiel at second would seem to fit in with Manager McKechnie's plan to get every bit of hitting strength available into the lineup.

Rhiel is not the smooth, swift fielder that is Maguire and Rhiel has not had the experience teaming up with Maranville.

Maguire and Maranville Made Fine Combination

Last year Maguire and Maranville formed a fine fielding second base combination as could be found in either league. The Braves finished at the bottom of the ladder in the race but would have even a worse average had they not been aided by the play of the tribal second sack combine

All the great teams of baseball history have had strong pairs, at short and the keystone sack. If the Braves are going to win ball games their center infield pair due must function without a hitch.

Rabbit and Fred Maguire would be sure to work together as a unit and Rabbit and Rhiel might not do as well afield

Maguire always has been a weak hitter, but this spring in the practice game, was smiting the ball with plenty of power. So he is apt to be a stronger batter, under pressure of fighting to stick in the lineup

Maguire One of Most Popular Players on Team

Fred, who lives in Newton Center, has been one of the most popular of all the players on the diamond outmond in Boston. So he will have the cheers and encouragement of his Hub friends in his fight to stay in the position he filled so well last season with the Tepes group.

The question will be whether a possible little extra hitting power will be worth a sacrifice of some degree of fielding ability. The struggle between the two will be good to watch.

B. C. Volley-Ball Starts Today

Volley-ball, a new intra-mural sport at Boston College, will officially begin today when the new courts are baptized on Alumni Field.

Class teams are expected to be formed and a spring tournament will be held with some sort of a prize being given to the championship team.

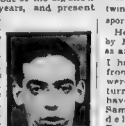
Lisenbee's Comeback Adds Strength to Sox Pitching

YOUNGSTER NOW RATED AS REGULAR

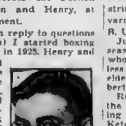
By JOE CASHMAN

PENSACOLA, Fla., March 25—Horace Lisenbee, greatest pitching find of the 1927 season, and greatest pitching flop of the last two campaigns, gives every indication of reaching the heights again this summer.

Gone completely is the sore arm which kept him out of the big show the past two years, and present again are all the assets that enabled him to win 18 games for the Senators his first year up, such as blinding speed, baffling change of pace, and perfect control. According to Mitt Gaston, who knows his baseball, especially the pitching end of it, and was a Senator when Lisenbee was hanging up his great record, he did showed more stuff his last time out, which was in Monday's scrub game, than he did at any time during his great season.



Joe Cashman



Jack Conway

Whether or not that is so, "Lis" certainly displayed as much class as any of the other Sox hurlers has thus far. He allowed just one clean hit and not a run in six innings.

His control was perfect. He threw few balls that were good to hit, yet did not give a single pass, and his change of pace was so much better than the batters had experienced previously that they looked like a gang of schoolboys facing the world's greatest flinger.

When they were looking for a slow ball he would shoot a fast one they couldn't see, and when they were set for speed he would knock them off stride with a slow knuckle ball.

Lisenbee Now Rated as Regular Hurler

He set 14 men down in order between the first and sixth innings and most of these fouled out or went out on infield flies.

As a result of his great showing, he is now rated as a regular, and from here on will be worked in turn with Morris, Ruffing, Russell, MacFayden and Gaston.

And unless his arm ailment returns he ought to turn in as good a record as any of his mates this season.

Lisenbee's come-back, one of the most remarkable we have ever seen in baseball, is a big boost for Bill Carrigan's diamond judgment.

The experts laughed at the Lewiston squire when he accepted "Lis" as part payment for Buddy Myer, claiming that the hurler would never be any good again.

Bill insisted that if the kid acquired the will to come back, he would succeed.

Carrigan Had Faith in Lisenbee's Ability

That's exactly what happened. He appeared convinced last spring that he couldn't make the grade and he didn't. So Carrigan had to send him back to the tall grass. But before doing so, "Old Rough" told him how he could make good.

"Just make up your mind you will succeed and you will," was the pilot's advice.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

There is one factor about his swing which we have been discussing this week which, I sincerely hope, may not seem to disturb you too greatly — and that is, we have been talking about perfectly made swings. This obviously implies that you have a good common lunging and whanging at the ball, and that you will know how to swing the club as the club, which means getting it away first from the top, the body following after; that your stance and "rip and snort" are fairly correct. To accomplish that swing from the inside out, I might mention, take the club back inside the line, as the saying is, if you find that makes it easier for you. It is not bad form at all to do so—plenty do. And keep your right leg straight all the way forward. Any kneebending will be fatal. Swing with your arms, starting the arms directly downward from the top and meantime holding the body back an instant, until the club shoots first. Then it will keep in front of you, as it should. With such a swing, made wholly with the arms, you will soon see that a by idea of hitting straight through, or presumably on a straight line through the ball and forward, would not be desirable.

Perlick Twins Drop in and Say 'Hello'

11 a. m.—Meets the Perlick twins, Herman and Henry, at sports department.

Herman—(In reply to questions by Mr. Boston) I started boxing as an amateur in 1925. Henry and I had worked from time we were 12. Since turning pro. have battled Sammy Mandell, Jack Berg, Armand Santiago, Jake Zeretsky, Harry (Kid) Brown and Solly Seaman. Will fight anybody in the world, but Henry. He's too tough. Notice my left lamp. It is black and blue from a punch I got from Henry in the gym the other day. I am 21 years of age and weigh between 133 and 137 pounds.

Henry—I'll fight any guy in the world but Herman. He's too tough. His punches crush and bruise. I fought a draw with Santiago after he fouled out on Herman. Just knocked out Charley White. Have battled Clucky Clarke, Edward Corte, Marty Silvers, Vic Walters and a lot of other pretty fair birds.

Manny Schupan, manager of the twins, and Mickey Lennan, trainer—Herman will lick Flowers and Henry will whollop Diamond on Thursday night.

Mr. Boston—Yeah

DeValera Talks on Ireland and Boston

Jack English—Mr. Boston, I want you to meet Eamon De Valera.

DeValera—I believe your city should be made the capital of Ireland.

Nick Flatley (after being introduced by Bert Ford to DeValera) —There are a few Irish in Boston, at that.

Mr Boston—How do you like our city?

DeValera—I am not as well acquainted in Boston as I am in New York, Chicago and Washington where I have spent much time, but I find Boston growing on me. You have a fine city. And so many people who have a live interest in Ireland.

English—How are conditions in Ireland?

DeValera—There is quite a lot of unemployment there. Of course Ireland never had many industries and so jobs have never been plentiful. My party is a constructive one and I feel it will help conditions in Ireland. We do not care to have Ireland only a ranch for England.

Sharkey Is Sure He Will Beat Max

1.15 p. m. Mr. Boston meets Jack Sharkey.

Sharkey—For the next four or five weeks I intend to do a great deal of hunting and fishing in the woods of New Hampshire to fit me for my bout with Schmeling in June. I believe outdoor exercise is the best way to get fit for an important ring bout.

Mr. Boston—What do you intend to do to Schmeling?

Sharkey—Beat him as decisively as possible. I intend to prove Americans still rule the ring.

MacLean Sings Praises of Al Friedman

2 P. M.—To lunch.

2.45 p. m.—Mr. Boston meets Alex MacLean, matchmaker at the Garden.

Alex—I believe Friedman and Monte will furnish a great fight on Friday night. Friedman has built up a large following by tackling every heavyweight in the country who would consent to meet him. He's a willing, pleasing type of battler. Monte has been winning regularly and believes he can beat Paul again. These boys have met nine times as amateurs and pros and Monte has always won the duke.

3:30 p. m. Enter Sammy Berensen, Gene Driscoll, Georgs Freeman, Jerry Buckley and a lot of other folks who are interested in talking sports, getting Annie Oakleys and trying to find out what kind of baseball clubs Boston is going to have during the coming season.

5:30 p. m. Home for dinner. Some parlor football with the youngsters after dinner and then off to the international boxing bouts at the Boston Arena.

1 a. m. (On way home in taxi Mr. Boston—It was a rather large day at that.

REGULARS AND SCRUBS CLASH AT HARVARD

After hanging a 5-1 defeat on the Harvard varsity baseball nine, the Harvard seconds were after their second win as the regulars and yannigans clashed in the Briggs indoor cage at Harvard today.

The second string players have slugging ability to spare, and several may find their way into first string positions before the Harvard season gets underway with B. U on April 5.

Jud Rex, who is playing his first season of baseball at Harvard and who reported to Coach Mitchell less than a week ago, is Sam Batchelder's closest rival for catcher's berth.

Rex made his hitting debut in the first tilt by driving a screaming hit over third base to score Ketchum and Des Roches. The stocky backstop is rated as one of Mitchell's strongest hitters, and in addition has a great throwing arm.

Roland and Emil Des Roches, brother ball players, are also making strides for first team spots. Roland is an outfielder, while Emil plays second base. Roland scored two runs and Emil a third in the 5-1 debacle which opened the season.

Mark Crehan Likely to Win Varsity Berth

Mark Crehan is another scrub who will bear watching this season Crehan was discovered by Mitchell during the fall baseball session, and since reporting this spring has shown considerable ability both at bat and in the field

His speed in the field and tremendous reach at first the outdoor session was what first attracted Mitchell's attention, though at the time, Crehan had no idea of reporting seriously for baseball.

DOUBLE TROUBLE FOR RINGMEN

BRUINS PLAY MAROON SIX

it must be admitted that in this series Hooley Smith and Dave Trottier have been the chief trouble makers.

They have all slipped over their little jabs and butt ends and they have been allowed, in most instances, to get away with these minor infractions. But Smith and Trottier should both have drawn majors for their assaults on Hitchman, instead of minors, according to the rules which govern the game.

Maroons Must Open Up to Win Tonight's Game

With the Bruins leading two games, the Maroons must open up, which is a break for the local fans. In the first game in Montreal, the Maroons played defensive hockey from start to finish and tied the Bruins up so succ...fully that it required more than 45 minutes of overtime play before a decision could be reached.

After starting out to play the "Kitty-bar-the-door" style of hockey on Saturday, the Maroons' defense cracked suddenly in the second period and before they could recover, the Bruins ran in three goals on them.

And after they had scored two goals in the final period, another defensive break, for which Pal Walsh was largely responsible, paved the way for Dit Clapper's second goal, which ruined the Maroons.

As regards goals scored, the Thunderbolt trio is on even terms with the Dynamiters, each line having scored three times. Harry Oliver has popped in a couple of goals, as has Dit Clapper, and the others were made by Marty Barry and Cooney Weiland.

The Dinty Moore and Galbraith line has looked great against the Maroons. Marty Barry has given them more trouble than any Bruin. He has met with wonderful success dribbling through the Montreal team.

But he has taken a terrible beating. His body is bodily heavily tripped, clashed across the feet and chopped across the forearms.

Cleveland Wins Pro Basketball Crown

Cleveland, O., March 25 Cleveland won the American professional basketball league world series here by defeating Rochester, 21 to 15.

FINNEGAN IS TO COME BACK

Honeyboy Finnegan, Dorchester southpaw, has finally heard the call to return to the ring, and negotiations have been completed by Eddie Mack of the Argonne A. A for a meeting with the lion-hearted Hub lightweight and the winner of the clash between Herman Perlick, one of the classy Kalamazoo wins, and Bruce Flowers, the Ebony Phantom of New Rochelle

Flowers and Herman Perlick clash at Mechanics Building Thursday night in one of the 10-round bouts of the double wind-up. Henry Perlick, the exact image of his brother, meets Hy Diamond of the West End in the other 10-rounder.

And while Finnegan has accepted terms for a return to the ring, at the same time Mack has completed details for a match for Andy Callahan of Lawrence with the winner of the Perlick-Diamond match. Present plans call for this proposed double wind-up on April 25, and for this reason the Kalamazoo klouters have been provided with an incentive to score a double victory.

Since their arrival in the Hub, the Perlick twins, the first in two decades of boxing, have been treated royally by the fans of Boston, and for this reason are anxious to return here as soon as possible Of course each of the twins look forward to victory in Thursday night's bouts, although they realize that they will have to be at their best

Bruce Flowers arrived in the Hub with the threat of making short work of Herman Perlick Flowers saw Perlick in action in New York and feels as though he will be able to outpoint the hard punching Westerner.

These Perlicks, who make their initial start here after taking the measure of every outstanding lightweight in the West, are the most dynamic performers in the ring today, and Hub fans anticipate more action than they have witnessed in many months

ONE ASSISTANT FOR M'EWAN

Worcester, Mass., March 25 (AP) Capt. John McEwan, new Holy Cross football coach, will work with one assistant instead of the usual corps, it became known today. Ivy Crowe, under Chic O'Donnell, former coach, had two line coaches, one end coach and one backfield coach outside of the usual freshman coaches.

McEwan's choice is Eugene L. Vidal of Washington, D. C., captain and co-star with Elmer Oliphant of the Army 1918 eleven. Whether he can play Vidal or not as does not know, but tenders have been forth

If Vidal comes to the Purple, McEwan asks for no further help. Vidal, who played football, basketball, baseball and track at the University of South Dakota before entering West Point, was McEwan's chief lieutenant at Oregon.

When McEwan signed with Holy Cross Saturday he was given the usual privilege of choosing his own assistants, with power to keep entire the present staff or not.

If his plans go through and he gets Vidal or some other man he wants, Crowe associate, one with a long career at the Purple school will go. Jake Kelley, for 15 years head coach and latter line coach; Sunny Corcoran, for three years end coach; Harry O'Boyle, former Notre Dame star and last season backfield coach, and Gus Cervini, assistant line coach, are not expected back.

Three men will be chosen to run in the medley relay to be held on April 25, and the same three will compete again in the two-mile race on April 26. ALREADY prepared infant foods are best given with fresh milk, not with condensed or diluted milk. This helps to avoid the possibilities of nutritional disturbances from too long-continued use. Care should be taken that the milk is strictly fresh and pasteurized.

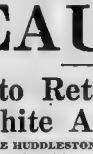
BEAUTY PREPARES FOR OUTDOOR SPORTS

How to Retain a Smooth, White Arm in Sun

By JOSEPHINE HUDDLESTON
World Famous Beautician

BLEACHING the arms is not a difficult task but before starting to do so it may be wise to consider just what you are going to do this summer. If you plan to spend a great deal of time playing in the open, bleaching at this time is rather a futile gesture unless you want to keep your skin free from tan during the entire season. I might add now, since I know many of you are wondering about it, that the tans of last summer are definitely taboo this season.



Josephine Huddleston

I'm inclined to believe, though, that light tanning will be acceptable during the summer, probably because it is almost impossible to play out-of-doors without gaining it, but other than a creamy tan, dark skins will not be fashionable.

I also think it will be possible to keep the skin from turning so dark even though long hours are spent in the open if you will take a little extra care of the skin, immediately after coming in from exposure. Certainly, the ultra feminine frocks that are to be so popular this summer are not going to blend gayly with a dusky skin. Those problems are for you to settle for yourself, however, and we will get on with the question of bleaching the skin for those who want to have smooth, white arms this summer.

If the skin is very dark, two or three "quick bleaching" methods should be used and then a milder form followed consistently over a period of weeks.

Clay packs are splendid bleachers in many cases. You can buy them already prepared if you wish or they can be made at home.

To make a satisfactory bleaching clay pack at home the following formula should be used:

Three (3) tablespoonfuls of peroxide, three (3) tablespoonfuls of witchhazel. Add these together and then add sufficient fuller's earth (all drug stores carry it) to make a creamy paste.

Whether you buy or make your clay, simply cleanse the skin with warm water and a pure soap, rinse off all soap and then without drying the skin, smooth a liberal amount of the preparation over the arms and hands. Let the clay remain on until it is dry then wash it off with cold water. Dry the arms gently and then smooth cleansing cream over them, let it remain on for a few minutes, then remove it and put on a liberal amount of skin tonic.

After two or three applications of the clay pack, taken at intervals of every three days, apply equal parts of lemon juice and water several times each day.

Stubborn freckles often can be removed by the daily use of pure lemon juice. Or, if you will keep a freshly cut lemon (one-half in the bathroom and the other half in the kitchen) you can rub it over the freckled arms each time you wash your hands.

Should the lemon juice fail to remove the freckles after a few weeks of daily use, the following preparation probably will be effective.

To three (3) tablespoonfuls of powdered pumice add sufficient peroxide to make a creamy paste. Smooth this over the skin and let it remain on until dry. Then moisten the powder with cool water until it wipes off easily.

A little cream should be allowed to remain on the skin for a few minutes following removal of the powdered pumice and peroxide to offset any drying effect the treatment may have if used daily for a week or so.

Girl Unafraid -:- By Gladys Johnson

out pre-arranged appointment. She didn't want to think. If she did, she would be afraid.

Sometimes Ardeth found Jeanette watching her with that curious narrow smile. But Jeanette's manner was very kind.

The days, going by, bright and easy. One must skim the surface of them, lightly—oh, so lightly, lest one break through and drop into the fear below. . .

She lived only for his presence—for the moment when he would come in the shop, calling a careless greeting to Jeanette, his leaning across at her in laughing caress. Often Tom Corbett came with him, friendly as a great dog. His brown eyes watched Ardeth admiringly as he talked.

But at night the fear pounced on her. Dull nights when she moved as though in a dream about the Harrison flat. Washing her underthings. Mending her clothes. Busy with tasks for her real life in the shop the next day. Hot flames of jealousy burned her then.

Where was Ken tonight? What was he doing in that other world where she could not follow? Was he with Cecile? Jealousy scorching her as she thought of Ken's vivid face bent close to Cecile's provocating lips. . .

Bitter moods washed away, the next day when she saw him waiting up near the flower stand. Saw his white smile in the sunlight. Heard his murmured "Hungry—for you, Moth!"

Dancing with Ken out at the beach on Saturday nights. Seeing his eyes darken with emotion when they looked at her face so temptingly near . . . Ken, holding her so tightly she could feel his heart beating on her own . . .

Then, in a moment, this dream world shattered . . .

She had come to the store early on Saturday night. Jeanette was coming down later and later, now that the novelty of the place was wearing off.

Ardeth slipped off her hat and coat and was standing at the mirror pressing the waves in her hair when a flash of something green caught her eye.

The postman, pushing the weekly issue of The Spy through the letter slot.

A moment later she was standing by the door, her eyes running down a column called "Through the Spyglass."

The Spy has long watched with interest the engagement of certain beauteous blonds and ons of our former collegiate football stars. This engagement, like those of royalty, was made by family arrangement. But in our humble opinion long engagements are a mistake. There are other beauteous blondes—though not of royalty—and blue eyes will rove. To your knitting, Cecile!

Working Man Healthier Than of Yore

By R. S. COPELAND, M. D.
U. S. Senator from New York, Former Commissioner of Health

ACCORDING to the latest federal census, there are 42 million people employed in gainful occupations in this country. This is a vast army.

Dr. Copeland

The machine age in which we live has given to the working man a higher standard of living than that possessed in any other age. He has shorter hours, better conditions of employment, and higher wages.

But the modern methods demand rigid, machine-like service which tends to make man's work equally mechanical. He is driven into grooves. Human values become machine values. The drabness and monotony of machine power is having its effects on the general health of workers, there is no doubt.

Very often do we hear that men, women and children are being exploited in the industrial world but after all they are infinitely better off than in former times. In the old days, the industrial worker was exposed to many dangers. Children, especially, fell under the deplorable conditions of the sweat shop.

There are many problems yet to be solved. Not yet have industrial workers the proper physical examinations. Illness and physical disabilities must be detected and treated. Facilities for healthful living conditions in the home, and recreation sufficient to maintain health, are lacking in many industrial communities.

Today the health officer and the professional health worker are working side by side to bring about better health conditions in many of these industrial communities. But there is still room for the regulation of health protection and health promotion in many states.

Education for the worker in industry is needed badly. He must have a proper knowledge of healthful living.

His home environment must be improved. His recreational facilities must be made an important part of his daily life. His health and mental vigor depend very much on the proper use of his leisure hours. He must have sufficient exercise, if he is working in a sedentary occupation, and plenty of fresh air and sunshine to keep physically fit.

We need further child protection in labor. Until 1909, there were no laws made preventing children from entering dangerous trades. Since that time 50 occupations have been closed to children under 16 years of age.

Children in industry are exposed to all sorts of contagion, and infection in early youth takes a heavy toll in diseases in later life. These diseases from various infections of the body are called the "degenerative diseases." It is a tremendous problem to meet—the health hazards of children in industry.

Safety measures for the protection of workers in industry are many, and yet we are appalled at the great number of accidents among factory employes, and those in other occupations. More protection for workers and more knowledge on the part of the worker how to maintain good health.

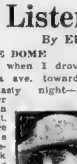
THE DOME

IT was night when I drove up Pennsylvania ave. toward the Capitol. A nasty night—harsh wind—a lather of scudding rain mixed with sleet. The lights were dimmed — the wide street became a dark tunnel. I lined with mean, hud died houses People, struggling home against the storm, were meaningless, weak blobs.



Elsie Robinson

and serene. Batteries of light played upon it, turning its stone to alabaster. Vast, radiant, it rose above the murk of the street, above the darkness of the storm, up into the heavens. For a moment the murk of the street opened, deeply blue, studded with stars, and against the blue the gilded dome shone, white and steadfast.

And I saw what I so often fail to see . . . THAT THERE IS SOMETHING IN LIFE ABOVE ALL STORM AND DARKNESS.

THERE is a dream in all lives that is like that dome. Always we long for something stronger than our weakness, taller than our littleness, whiter than our sordidness. In every heart there is that dream. You may look where you will in the roughest camps, in the smartest homes, in the hohoes' "jungle," in bread lines and brothels, in penitentiaries and slums —in every heart, wherever you may find it, there is a dream.

And because that dream is in our personal lives we have built it into our national life. We are a young people, a silly people, a greedy, stubborn, conceited, ignorant people. We build foolishly. We struggle weakly in storms which we bring upon ourselves. Yet, in spite of our pettiness and our folly, WE BUILT THAT DOME.

We built that dome because the dream that is within us is like that dome. We commit injustice, but we dream of justice. We are weak, but we dream of strength. We are dishonest, but we dream of honor. And we have built our dream into a dome to stand at the head of our nation.

Above it blaze the everlasting stars. We go so quickly we will never see those years. We love so dully we will never touch those stars. But our dream will last through the years—and blaze with the stars.

STORMS MAY COME AND STORMS MAY GO—BUT THE DREAM THAT IS AMERICA WILL NOT PASS WITH THE STORMS—IT WILL GO ON AND ON, SHINING THROUGH THE NIGHT.

FOR AND ABOUT WIVES

AS long as a man is in love with a woman, he won't argue with her; but when a woman won't bother to argue with a man, her love is dead.

It's real love, if your young husband can get the same thrill out of seeing you in a new spring hat for which he has just received the bill, as he did out of seeing you in the ones your father paid for.

OF course, a woman should have perfect faith in her husband; but even the Scriptures don't require that she should go so far as to let him select his own trained Nurse.

The great advantage in being married to one man is that all the other immediately feel that they can come to your parties and pay you all kinds devoted little attentions—with perfect safety.

When a wife succeeds in convincing her husband that staying at home evenings is a duty, nature hy-presses to regard it as a privilege or a pleasure.

Somehow, the public announcement of his engagement to marry always makes a man look and feel foolish and self-conscious as though somebody had handed him a baby to hold.

Lovejoy -:- Serial by Beatrice Burton

CHAPTER 63

"I've been sitting up with the baby at night—lately," she said hesitatingly.

"You aren't needed now, though," Lovejoy answered her clearly. "I'm taking care of my baby."

That night Aunt Em went to bed. Lovejoy and Tom settled themselves down in the dinner-room with the door open so that they could hear any sound that the baby made.

The lamp on the table showed Tom's face haggard and thin. For the first time it struck Lovejoy that he looked as if he had been sick.

"Been sick, Tom?" she asked.

"No. What makes you think so?" He smiled, his mouth hard with pain.

"You'd hardly expect me to be fat and smiling when my kid's dying by inches in there," he said bluntly.

It came to her, with a sense of shock, that he was suffering just as much as she was. And through her own sorrow she was suddenly sorry for him.

She stretched out her hand to him across the table. He looked down at it, seeing Steve Oglebay's ring for the first time.

"What's that thing?" he asked although he must have known what it stood for.

At that instant the telephone rang sharply through the quiet house.

"Minden, Nevada, calling Mrs Lovejoy Nicholson," said the long distance operator in Lovejoy's ear when she went to answer it. "Mrs. Nicholson? Hold the wire, Mrs. Nicholson."

After three or four minutes of waiting she heard Steve's voice saying hello.

"Hello, Steve," she answered him, looking over her shoulder at Tom as she spoke

He had not moved.

"How are you, dear?" Steve asked in her ear.

"All right."

"How did you find the baby? Better?"

"No. He's just as sick as he can be. He doesn't know me, Steve. He just sleeps all the time—"

"I can't hear you, darling!" he interrupted her. "Are you close to the telephone?—Listen to me, Lovejoy. I've found a place here in Minden for you and the baby. As soon as I can get—"

Lovejoy never heard the end of that sentence. She felt Tom's hand on her arm. In an instant he had the took the telephone out of her hands and put the receiver on its rest with a crash.

"That bird can talk to you all he wants to," he said roughly, "but he can't talk to you about my kid. See?—Tommy still belongs to me, and don't you forget it!"

It was on the tip of Lovejoy's tongue to tell him that Tommy wouldn't belong to him much longer—that as soon as she could she was going to take him out west to the house that Steve had rented for her in Minden.

But I mustn't say a word! she reminded herself

The thing to do was to slip away quietly with the baby as soon as he was better.

She mustn't even say a word about her plans to Aunt Em

But some fine morning, later on, when the baby was better, she would bundle him up and make her escape with him. She would be on a train and miles away before Aunt Em could let Tom know what she had done.

The telephone bell began to ring again.

"Don't touch the thing," Tom said shortly.

He walked over to the sideboard He opened a drawer and took from it the big silence-cloth that Aunt Em used on the dining-room table when she set it. He rolled the telephone up in it so that its shrill ringing was nothing more than a tiny thread of muffled sound.

Lovejoy heard him mutter something about the sound of it waking up the baby. She heard him swear softly to himself

"I wish it would wake him up," she said. "He just lies there hour after hour almost as if he were dead—"

"Yes, and he's been doing it for days, remember!" Tom answered her, nodding his head solemnly. Fear and torment were written in his eyes and in every drawn line of his face.

In a second he came back.

"Come here!" he said. "Something's happened to the baby. He's breathing—He's breathing too fast. A lot faster than he was a while ago—You come in and take a look—"

She needed only one look at young Tommy to see that something was dreadfully wrong with him.

His closed eyes were sunk in deep shadowy cercle and his breath came in jerks that shook his little body. It sounded as if he had a toy whistle down in his chest

"Oh, Tom, what's happened to him?" Lovejoy wailed, her eyes wide with terror. "Tom, what will we do?—Tom—the baby—"

It was Tom who dashed out of the room and telephoned for Dr. Arnold.

Then she heard him open the door and run up the stairs. A moment afterward Tom and Norris Shane came to the baby's room together.

It's No Crime to Marry Rich Girl

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My interest is to achieve business success by the time I am 30. I have a good start and do not want to spoil things by making a foolish marriage. Do you know any reason why I shouldn't try to marry a girl with money?

YOUNG BUSINESS MAN.

THERE are men, and no doubt you are one of them, who seem to be able to combine prudence and affection, who can plan a life with reference purely to business success and yet who can fit a wife (rich or poor) into this life so capably that perhaps she is just as happy as if she came first and business second. There is no crime in marrying a rich girl if you can persuade yourself—and her—that you love her, and if you have not rarely made the really serious mistake of rashly making love to some unsuspecting girl unblessed with money.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 15 years of age, and greatly in love with a married man who also loves me. He is 30 years old. He says he found out after he married that he did not love his wife and could not be true to her. He wants me to run away with him and forget the past and start a new life.

Please advise, as I am

WORRIED.

YOU have every reason to be worried, my dear child. Your letter shows that you have been completely duped by an utterly unscrupulous and vicious man. As you value your happiness, drop him, and at the same time take into your confidence some member of your family. If you are an orphan, talk to some sensible person.

Proper Way to Butter Bread

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

We have had an argument about a very important question. Should you butter bread whole in the palm of your hand, or should it be buttered on the table?

D. E. C.
Needham.

Neither is correct. Break from your piece of bread a mouthful, hold it on the side of your bread and butter plate, spread it there, and eat it before you break off the next mouthful. One of the most serious errors of table manners is to butter a whole piece of bread at one time. It stamps us at once as unaccustomed to knowing what's what. Just as resting the handle of your knife on the table does!

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

When at a very formal dinner party you have to sneeze, which is better to do, to sneeze in the handkerchief or leave the table

Chelsea.

Unfortunately sneezing is not such a convenient process as your question suggests. And it usually doesn't leave us the leisure of a choice in the matter of locale! We must "meet the enemy" with as much grace and manners as possible, not arranging into our handkerchief, quickly, snatched to our rescue. Usually it is not necessary to leave the table, and usually we haven't the time to do so. Also it attracts too much attention to an unfortunate exigency which all of us understand.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I am to hold an informal reception at my home for a girl friend of mine. The ordinary working people and there will be possibly twelve guests. We had planned a "tea dance" affair with cold meats, fruit salad, cakes and so forth Could you give me an idea as to how the guests should be seated also a correct menu, as I have never held anything of this kind?

EVANGELINE.
South Boston.

Since apparently your party will be somewhat in the form of a supper party, the kind of menu that you have planned will be appropriate I suggest that you have one hot item, and probably you can do this, since you are to have so few guests. You might first, for instance, have cups of hot bouillon or an even more consequential soup Or, one item of the meat course might be a hot food, such as su gratin potatoes or an escalloped vegetable, Or—and, even at the head of the table, the host, if there is one, opposite her. At the host's right, the woman guest of honor, and at his left the woman who is to receive the second honor. At the right of the hostess, the man guest of honor, and at her left, the man who is to be given second honor.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Is it correct to take sugar lumps with fingers or should you take your spoon? This seems rather hard to do?

BEN.
Malden.

If no sugar tongs are served with the sugar bowl it is proper to take the lumps with your fingers. I agree with you that it is hard to use the spoon.

Mrs. Smithers was explaining the routine to the new cook.

"We lunch precisely at 1 on Wednesday," she said, "as on that day we always go for a spin in the car at 2."

"Very good, mum," replied the cook, "but I shall have to leave the washin' up till we gets back again."

Good to Eat

THE open season for spring salads is now with us and after we've settled on the kind of salad we are going to serve for lunch or dinner, the next question is what kind of dressing we'll serve with it.

There are endless recipes of course, mayonnaise, boiled and French dressing, but few, I think, that are superior to the cooked salad dressing I have for you today. It is particularly adapted to the type of fruit salad that's often served in the place of dessert.

SMART SAYINGS OF CLEVER CHILDREN

The Boston Evening American will pay $1 for published smart sayings. Address "Smart Sayings," Boston Evening American.

I gave Patricia, 5-year-old, a tiny cup of weak tea and a long tea leaf floated on top of her cup. She said, "We're going to have company." I said, "That must be Mr. A. He's so tall." Later on, when we were most through supper Patricia said, "Mama, please take Mr. A out of my cup so I can drink my tea."

*After guarantees and preferred dividends.

Is the stock market a true barometer of business? This question is frequently asked in State Street circles, and the answer usually is in the affirmative.

One big New York Stock Exchange house with Boston connections says: "Gov. Young of the Federal Reserve Board is quoted as saying at a meeting of the American Automobile Association, at which he addressed business men throughout the country to show more initiative and less hesitancy as a means of getting trade and industry back on its feet. This address was reported in full in the papers and ought to be read by every one

"There is nothing that buoys up business sentiment more than a good stock market and, as far as we can recall, every recovery in business has been forecast and preceded by rising stock prices. It might even be said that in some cases the boldness and courage of large stock traders in buying sound issues when no one wanted them actually of itself caused the turn in sentiment.

"Barron's brings out this thought when it says: 'We may take comfort in the prospect that the continued advance in stocks this winter and spring is likely to be accompanied by a recovery in business later in the year but also will hasten that recovery by giving renewed courage and optimism to every business man . . . In the last analysis, it is the prospect of increased dividends that causes a stock to advance. Carrying the sequence back step by step, we may say that the prospect of an advance in a dividend is based on the prospect of increased earnings, and increased earnings depend upon a larger volume of business. In like manner, increased business depends upon increased purchasing power of the public, which, of course, is directly dependent upon high wages and full employment. Thus we complete the circle, and are led back on the axiom—which comes first, the bird or the egg? But, and here is the hub of the situation, this circle is turned with increasing or decreasing velocity, and it takes but a small push or pull to change the speed. Everything comes back to mental causation.'

"A big help is the credit situation. Investors are looking around to use their savings. . . . There is reason to feel that the average investor is convinced that common stocks offer the best possibilities for the long pull. If this country is going into a decline in general trade, that view is a permanent lower level of prosperity, then the thing to do now is to buy safe 4½ per cent investments. However, we feel that the expansion of recent years is going to be continued. Hence, we believes that equities intelligently selected are the proper medium for investment."

Merger rumors embrace dozens of banks, following the creation of the new Chase National, putting it in the forefront of all the world's banks. Increasing strength and activity feature the bank stock market. New York banks, as usual, leading. One story heard in State Street reads that Brooklyn Trust is negotiating for Lafayette and Dartwood with the idea of eventually merging with Chase. This would still further solidify the top-most position occupied by the great, new bank led by New England talent.

Note the familiar transition: first, water power, then steam power, then electrical current.

President Irving S. Paull of International Match Manufacturers of America, Inc., denies report that $1,000,000 of "drop" patterns are to be dumped on market next week. He says there is no surplus of distress merchandise of any character. More grist for the "old bear rumor mill" found worthless.

Natural Gas Industry Making Fast Progress

RECENT successful negotiations preceding merger of United Gas Co. and several natural gas companies in the Southeast, with Electric Bond & Share properties into a $220,000,000 natural gas concern, bring additional testimony to bear on the rapid progress being made in the natural gas industry. Extension of pipe lines and increase in natural gas production together with great activity and appreciation in natural gas securities in recent weeks, lends additional emphasis to the proportions the growth of the relatively new industry is assuming.

Present estimates indicate that natural gas reserves will answer needs of the country for many generations. Chief supplies are found in Louisiana, Texas and Oklahoma with other southern and Californian deposits accounting for not an insignificant portion. Cost of production in southern fields ranges from 3.3 cents to 6.7 cents per 1000 cubic feet and as high as 17 to 20 cents in smaller northern fields. Cost of transportation ranges from three cents per 100 miles to about 17 cents, the newer systems operating at the lower level.

Natural gas interests are now seeking to enlarge the market from local southern points where the gas is used both industrially and domestically, to encompass all large cities of the country. Heating of homes on the Atlantic Seaboard by natural gas transported from southern fields is the ultimate possibility. Artificial gas now used in the big cities has a heat content of 539 British thermal units per 1000 cubic feet, against 1100 B. T. U. per 1000 cubic feet in the case of natural gas, and it is estimated that many of the larger cities in the country can be switched over to natural gas delivered at a price shading that of the manufactured product.

It is expected that the artificial and natural gas facilities may be still further combined as has been done already in many large cities. Greater heat content and lower costs would spell inevitably increased consumption. Hence, the big activity currently in construction of pipe lines, program for which approximates $500,000,000 is under. Plans now on hand should mean thousands of miles of additional pipe lines and millions of dollars of investment.

Below are listed some of the foremost of the big companies operating in part in the natural gas industry today, many of which are listed on the leading exchanges. High and low levels for the issues are given, as well as the closing price is at or near the 1930 high:

WEATHER AIDS PLANE MARKET

Detroit, March 25—The break in weather conditions during the past few weeks is having a favorable reaction on the airplane market, according to Cranfield Nautical Reports, a Detroit economic service.

Especially is this true in the southern and far western territories where activity is reported to be on the increase. The training schools, taxi operators and transport lines have been holding off somewhat to see what final results of price cutting would be and with larger operations now in effect are beginning to take on needed equipment.

Production continues to hold above levels established last month, although there is a possibility that total output for the current period will not equal that established in January. Heavy last minute stocking of dealers may bring the total up considerably.

One promising indication of strength is the growth reported in several builders of individual ordering. As a rule the majority of ships ordered during the first part of any season are intended for regular factory representatives, and private sales are consummated later.

The engine companies are also beginning to deliver motors on the contracts that have been received previously. Many of the builders are still make up the majority of outgoing engines, with little or no business being booked for some time to come.

Military business is picking up for companies fortunate enough to obtain government orders. This holds equally true, of course, for plane and engine builders.

Price reductions continue to be announced by aircraft builders, which do not have the effect of stimulating the prospect of increased earnings, and increased earnings depend upon a larger volume of business. In like manner, increased business depends upon increased purchasing power of the public, which, of course, is directly dependent upon high wages and full employment. Thus we complete the circle, and are led back on the axiom—which comes first, the bird or the egg? But, and here is the hub of the situation, this circle is turned with increasing or decreasing velocity, and it takes but a small push or pull to change the speed. Everything comes back to mental causation.

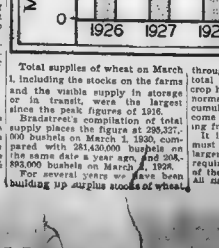
Insull Issue to Pay Stock Dividend

Insull Utility Investments, Inc., declared a stock dividend of 1⅛ per share on account of the common, payable April 15 to stock of record March 31. Quarterly dividend of one-half of 1 per cent in common on the common, previously declared, is payable the same dates.

Detroit Aircraft Operations Are Up

Los Angleses, March 25—Operations of Lockheed unit of Detroit Aircraft Corp, are between 60 and 90 days behind orders, Malcolm Loughead, General Manager Squire, of Burbank plant. It is producing up to 12 special jobs a month. Combined earnings statement for 1929 should be encouraging, he believes.

PUBLISHERS FINANCIAL BUREAU



Total supplies of wheat on March 1, including the stocks on the farms and the visible supply in storage or in transit, were the largest since the peak figures of 1926.

Broadstreet's compilation of total supply places the figure at 295,327,000 bushels on March 1, 1930, compared with 281,430,000 bushels on the same date a year ago, and 208,893,000 bushels on March 1, 1926.

For several years we have been building up surplus stocks of wheat through inability to market the total crop. Carryovers of the old crop have been running larger than normal. Coupled with this accumulation of surplus supplies, has come the factor of diminishing buying from Europe.

It is felt, however, that Europe must turn to us before long for larger quantities to meet her own requirements prior to the advent of the new crop.

Mr. Huffman reported the canning industry was expanding rapidly in Cuba. Sales of the Cuban plant are 10 per cent ahead of this time a year ago and operations are at capacity.

BULL RAMPAGE IS STAGED IN WALL STREET

By STANLEY W. PRENOSIL

New York, March 25 (AP)—The stock market started out on a wild bull rampage today in which a hundred or more stocks were lifted to new high records for the year.

So great was the volume of trading that the ticker fell 45 minutes behind the sales as the day's initial rushing sufficient profit-taking and short selling to interrupt, but not completely check, the advance by early afternoon.

Extreme gains in the active issues ranged from 4 points to 20 points at the end of the third hour scores of stocks had dipped a point or two below their year's highs.

BULLISH FACTORS

Passage of the tariff bill by the United States Senate, lowering of the call money rate from 6 to 3½ per cent and reports that operations of the United States Steel Corporation were being maintained at 80 per cent of capacity, the first time in three weeks that they had not shown a decline, provided the background for the upward movement.

Short covering also was an important factor in the buying, particularly in some of the high priced specialties of which there is a small floating supply.

While the call money rate dropped from 6 to 3½ per cent, impetus for the rise was given by incidental to the heavy mid-month Federal income tax, dividend and interest payments time money rates held firm. All dealers advanced bankers acceptances ⅛ of 1 per cent after having made nine successive reductions of similar amount

The rapid advance in the market, accompanied by unbridled speculation in some of the pool specialties, led to attempts of caution and profit taking by several of the leading commission houses

STANDARD OILS LEAD

Revival of speculative activity in the oils was based on unofficial estimates of another sharp reduction in crude production last week and the prospects of higher prices for refining prices. Standard Oil of New Jersey and Houston, with gains of 3 points, were the leaders of that group. Foster Wheeler, A. M. Byers, Wothington Pump and stocks of other companies which manufacture pipe and oil machinery advanced in sympathy

Despite the fact that the February railroad earnings statements now being published make unfavorable comparison with last year, buying continued in the railroad group.

Chicago & Eastern Illinois issues showed strength on the ground on unconfirmed reports that the Van Sweringen interests had acquired the Thompson-Starrett Co. and other holdings in that road. Union Pacific, Wabash, Frisco Common and Lehigh Valley also moved into the high ground

Peoples Gas, which sold as low as $220 this year, rose 8 points to a new high at 317, Vanadium Steel jumped 5½ points to a new top at 64½, with Bethlehem Steel this year's low of 48¾, but met heavy profit taking at that level.

Bullard Co., Newport Co. American Can., Air Reduction, Colorado Fuel, Eastman Kodak, Union Carbide, A. M. Byers, Foster Wheeler, Worthington Pump, Ward Baking preferred, McClellan Stores and General Railway Signal all moved into new high ground on gains ranging from 3 to 6 points

Among the many other issues to reach new high ground were American Telephone, Bethlehem Steel, U. S. Steel, American Bank Note, Checker Cab and American Power & Light.

Western Union, Columbian Carbon and J. I. Case were among the few outstanding soft spots.

City Ice Plans to Acquire Company

Cleveland, March 25—City Ice & Fuel Co. plans to acquire board Terminal & Warehouse Co. of Jersey City. It is proposed to issue Seaboard holders one share of 6% per cent preferred of City Ice for each share of Seaboard common.

Seaboard Co. handles all freight brought into the terminal by Erie and its contract warehouse. Erie has leased four floors of the 10-story building at Erie terminal in Jersey City for 30 years

Kinney Co. Has Larger Earnings

New York, March 25—The G. R. Kinney Co., Inc., pamphlet report for year ended December 31, 1929, reports net of $947,606 after interest, federal taxes, etc., equivalent after 8 per cent preferred dividends to $3.27 a share on 160,000 no-par shares of common, against $857,366 or $2.73 a share in 1928, based on the same number of common shares. On Dec. 31, 1929, it had 365 stores in operation, against 317 at close of 1928.

Cotton Higher in New York Market

New York, March 25 (INS)—The cotton future market was steady today in response to relatively steady Liverpool cables. Prices opened from up 8 points to off 2 points from yesterday's close. Futures then rallied. July was at 13.72, up 16, and October old was at 13.96, up 12.

Newton Steel Company

Newton Steel Co. reports for 1929 net profit of $3,077,680 after charges and taxes.

Many Can Help Prosperity Now By Doing This

Money Is Offered to Home Owners to Make Improvements to Aid Workless

—By B. C. FORBES—

NEW YORK, March 25—A homely, useful, sensible suggestion comes to this column from Peter J. Brady, head of the best-known labor bank in the country, the Federation Bank and Trust Company of New York. He writes:

"Here is a circular which, in my opinion, is worth considering for your column, especially when the Railroad Cooperative Building and Loan Association is the largest of its kind in the United States, with resources of over $55,000,000.

B. C. Forbes

"Of course this serves a double purpose: it not only urges people to make necessary repairs now to give employment to others, but it also accomplishes another important thing, in that they are keeping their own house in order and up to date."

"To Home Owners:

"President Hoover recommends modernization of homes.

"Do you need a new heating plant or a new bathroom? Is the wiring of your home adequate? Do your gutters and leaders need rehabilitation? Are your cement walks or brick work in need of repair? Do you need a new roof?

"We have money available for these or other modernization program provided your property has sufficient value.

"When does your present mortgage become due? Our mortgage department will be glad to discuss with you any problem concerning refinancing or modernization."

Now that money in cheap and plentiful, surely it would help a lot if all institutions, associations and others having access to large amounts of money would send similar notices to their clients and customers, and also advertise their readiness to extend financial cooperation in having work of this kind done.

Personally, I would appeal particularly to employees enjoying steady jobs and good pay to devote serious thought to the plight of those now unable to find opportunity to earn a living. Many such home-loving aspirs either to acquire homes of their own or to make improvements on homes already owned. Instead of waiting, it would be humane to make arrangements to have the work done now. A full day's work can now be obtained for a day's pay and a full dollar's worth of material can be obtained for a dollar. Among all classes the "ins" should have the utmost consideration at a time like this for the "outs."

More and more attention is being given the question of whether the time has not come in this country, with all its labor-saving machinery and cheap power and brilliant managerial skill, to reduce the normal work week.

Charles H. Hatch, well-known industrial engineer, discussing this subject, said:

"With over-production already a fact, it is obvious that to give full-time employment to all of the unemployed would greatly aggravate the present serious conditions.

"It is coming to be realized by thoughtful business leaders that the only solution is to reduce the number of hours each man will be employed, and so give every one some work.

"We once thought of full-time work as consisting of the 12 or 14-hour day and the six or seven-day week. Today in many trades the man who works full time spends only seven or eight hours a day for five days of his week. It is certainly that some day full-time work will be the three-day week of seven or eight hours a day.

"For such a result to be accomplished without any large contract will naturally leave a void in Warren Brothers' volume of business in the books ahead. In the meantime the company has landed some good-sized contracts. It has bids in for work at numerous places around the globe. Some of these bids may result in business. Moreover, with the United States the emphasis is strongly upon road building and other public works as a means of combating unemployment, so that a larger than usual volume of domestic contracts over the next year or two is a reasonable expectation.

CURB MARKET PROFIT-TAKING IN EVIDENCE

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER

New York, March 25 (AP)—Operations for the account were forwarded in this vigor on the curb market today, but there remained a distinct tendency to take profits on advances, and this market failed notably to develop the buoyancy of the "Big Board."

Trading was in large volume, the tape falling several minutes behind at times, but was not proportionate to the hectic activity on the larger market. The curb remained leading market for new securities, and, as new financing remains at low ebb, activity in this market is correspondingly curtailed.

American Cyanamid "B" was sent up more than 2 points in active trading to new high quotation for the year, and Deere new stock rose 3 to its best. Among the issues, American Chain and A. O. Smith penetrated further into new high ground. Aluminum Co. made up several points in a moderate turnover.

Pacific Aircraft, a firm spot yesterday, encountered considerable profit-taking in response to rumors that the 1929 earnings report would be rather unsatisfactory.

Oils continued to climb, but at a somewhat reduced rate. Standard of Indiana got into new high territory above 57, and Humble was in fair demand. Gulf turned rather dull. Cities Service was again active, but failed to break out of its recent narrow trading area.

United Gas issues were again active features of the utilities, the old stock selling up to record levels around 45. Electric Bond and Share held a couple of points below its peak of the year. Consolidated Gas of Baltimore sold up moderately to new high ground.

Transcontinental was a strong feature of the investment trusts, rising a couple of points to new high ground. Guardian Fire was a soft spot, U. S. Aviation Co. dropping to a new low for the year.

$3 DIVIDEND SUGGESTED

Based on the proposed 3-for-1 split of Warren Bros. common, the 1929 earnings were equivalent to about $5 a share on the new common. Actual profits for the year recently concluded were $3,002,238, equal after first and second preferred dividends to $18.17 a share on 156,742 common shares.

Warren Bros. officials have given no intimation of the dividend rate to be applied to the split-up common. However, the old stock is on an $8 dividend basis and for each of each of the past four years there has been a $1 extra payment. Therefore, 700,000 shares assumed that the present dividend rate is $3, including $1 extra, the proportionate basis for the split-up stock would be $3, or just half of the 1929 earnings.

It is evident that the Cuban contract is making a material contribution to the earnings of the Warren Bros.-Southern Co. Agreegating $6,858,770 received from the Cuban government following the completion of 200,000 loan, some of which payments were overdue, indicate that 1929 income was helped considerably by this contract. It should be a factor of importance in 1930, but the official expectation is that the 1930 volume of business will be completely finished and in use by March 1931.

Warren Bros. in large contract will naturally leave a void in Warren Brothers' volume of business in the books ahead. In the meantime the company has landed some good-sized contracts. It has bids in for work at numerous places around the globe. Some of these bids may result in business. Moreover, with the United States the emphasis is strongly upon road building and other public works as a means of combating unemployment, so that a larger than usual volume of domestic contracts over the next year or two is a reasonable expectation.

RESERVE BANK SUPPORT IS YOUNG PLAN

Washington, March 25 (INS)—Governor Roy A. Young, of the federal reserve board today proposed that every bank in the country be required to keep a deposit with a federal reserve bank.

In making his suggestions to the House banking committee, Young said non-member banks profit from the system's operation. The effect of the proposal, it was said by committee members, would be to give the reserve board more complete control over the nation's money system.

Young also said he favored greater distribution of enormous profits of the reserve bank among member banks. However, he opposed a fixed interest rate on deposits of member banks in the system.

BOND MARKET UNDERTONE IS FOUND FIRM

By JOHN L. COOLEY.

New York, March 25 (AP)—Small gains and losses were scattered through the bond list today, giving the market an appearance of surface irregularity on a slightly larger volume.

The undertone, however, was exceptionally firm and the lowering of the call loan rate to 5½ per cent from the renewal figure of 6 served to fill out some of the inconsistent depression. Turnover increased after the ease in money.

Dealers raised the rate on bankers' acceptances an eighth of one per cent. Time funds were steady in a dull market.

Strong spots embraced several Mid-Western rails. Chicago & Eastern Illinois 5s official more than a point and Chicago Great Western 4s rose 2. St. Paul Adjustment 5s crossed 77, but fixed rather slowly.

The high light of the convertible group was the rise in American Telephone 4½s to the highest level since last fall. Baltimore & Ohio 4½s rose fractionally, while Missouri Pacific 5½s sagged.

Early sales in Nickel Plate 4s, Missouri Pacific 5s, Sinclair Pipe Line 5s, Standard Oil of New Jersey 5s, Delaware & Hudson 4s, Lorillard 5s, Northern Pacific prior lien 4s and other representative bonds found a slightly lower market, but the half point losses in these issues were matched by gains in Santa Fe general 4s, Central Pacific 5s, Erie 5s, Southern Railway general 4s and other firm obligations.

Foreign bonds crept upward. In some instances progress was by sizeable steps. So for Belgium 7s rose a full point to equal their year's high. Italy 7s went into new high ground just under 101. Budapest City 6s rose ¾.

United States Government securities were slightly irregular.

The market's behavior in the face of substantial open financing is regarded as most satisfactory. Offerings of high-grade bonds are being distributed much faster than was the case a month ago and many of the new issues promptly command premium prices on admittance to trading.

The $18,000,000 Cleveland Union Terminals Company loan, in first mortgage 4½s, sold half a point above the offering price of 98 on "when issued" contracts this forenoon.

U.S. INCOME TAX RECEIPTS OFF

Washington, March 25 (AP)—Income tax receipts continued to drop below last year's total for the 22 days of March, according to the Treasury statement issued today showing collections from income tax on March 22. On that day the collections for the month aggregated $317,803,027 as compared with $547,188,703 for the same number of days in March, 1929.

The income tax receipts for March 22 were a few million dollars more than received on March 22 last year. Last Saturday the payments totalled $26,102,031 as compared with $21,100,878 a year ago.

While Treasury officials would not say definitely what the receipts collections indicated, it was believed that the total from the first quarter's payment on 1929 incomes would approximate $540,000,000, or about $60,000,000 less than last year.

The Treasury balance for March 22, 1930, was $376,480,925.63 while last year on the same day the balance was $410,571,409.

Fire in Shoddy Mill

Central Falls, R. I., March 25 (AP)—Fire here early today swept the shoddy mill of Sam Horvitz of Pawtucket and spread to the Central Waste Company, owned by Joseph Percelay of Pawtucket. Loss to Horvitz' mill was $1600.

At the Radio Dial

By THE RADIO EDITOR

TWO girls, prominent in Paul Whiteman's impending musical movie revue, "King of Jazz," share that magnitudinous maestro's microphone party in the Old Gold Hour on Columbia stations at 9 o'clock tonight. Jeanette Loff, tiny star of "Party Girl," and Grace Hayes, reputed to have the best singing voice in the Hollywood film colony, are the ladies who will ply us with assorted ditties, sandwiched between jazzy numbers by the band.

Rae Samuels heads a group of variety performers who fill out the B&O Hour commencing at 10:30 on the WEEI side of the NBC chain. She will sob "blues" of every shade, from baby to ultra-violet, with sarcasm and the well-worn spot in front of the microphone. Associated entertainers of the evening are Peter Higgins, tenor; Margaret Schilling, soprano; Florence Brady and Gil-

WITH a breathing space of two hours coming between, Henry Fisk Carlton and William Ford Manly will be able to do on two of the Hub's own brain-born playlets, to be broadcast over two competing networks tonight. The Moonyland Sketch on WEEI and other NBC stations at 7:30 is devoted to homely New England humor, while Dramatic drama, written by this versatile pair. The Graybar Minter and Mizaus picture, based on the cartoons of the late Claire Briggs, starts to sputter on Columbia stations at 9:30 P. M. This, too is their script, and it bears the subtitle, "Going Up."

A RADIO ORCHESTRA of symphony strength will be exploited by one of the most consistent commercial radio entertainers in the land. The Philco Hour, commencing one week from tomorrow, will take on a new aspect, with its weekly hour devoted entirely to classical numbers, played by what is probably the largest instrumental group on the air. Several times the sponsors of this hour have broadcast concerts by the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Leopold Stokowski. These were obviously of an experimental nature. Public reaction must have been favorable, inasmuch as the future schedule of the program will be built largely along symphonic lines. Howard Barlow, who is musically almost completely a radio product, has the conductorship of this group. In the 14 numbers which comprise the first program we find two by Wagner, two by Debussy, two by Bizet, and one each by Debussy, Mussorgsky, Lady Nevill, Rimsky-Korsakoff, Tschaikowsky, Haydn, Chopin and Gounod. There is nothing to say that is not generally familiar to radio listeners.

Heavy sighs of relief burst forth from a dozen distressed breasts in the Station WEEI studio at 7:30 on the dot of 7 o'clock last night. Engineers had been working frantically to bring a transmitter to terms. Announcers were pacing the floor. Managers and directors were nervously whispering which would have burned the button out of an open mike. Just as the most important hour of the day struck, the transmitter came to life, and Amos 'n' Andy had clear and uninterrupted headway. Somewhere, a fish grew wrong with the world, and, while Springfield continued to spout as obediently and steadily as Old Faithful, Boston's WEEI station refused to utter a peep until the miracle happened at the miraculous moment.

THE STURDINESS of the first Puritan governor of Massachusetts was graphically described by the present governor, Frank G. Allen, in his first talk in the broadcasting series, held at WEEI last night. Frugality, sobriety, piety and upright living were the virtues which stood out most strongly in this man's career. His tirelessness Governor Allen inferred in his description of John Winthrop's habits. It was no uncommon thing for him to walk all the way from his farm in Medford to Plymouth whenever it was necessary for him to visit that settlement. By coincidence, Mrs. Allen, with members of the governor's staff, occupied a box at the Hotel for the opening of Stanford-Upon-Avon Company's season of plays by Winthrop's contemporary, William Shakespeare.

A venerable New England cleric, Father Spence Burton, superior of the Society of St. John the Evangelist of Cambridge, will be heard as one of the speakers in tonight's Voters' Service program on WEAF and the New N. B. C. network. Father Burton, whose semi-monastical organization goes by the familiar name of the Cowley Fathers, will discuss prison work for a viewpoint of 23 years of devoted labor on behalf of the incarcerated.

"Philip M. Punzelt,
Builder

requests his many clients to please refrain from ordering new houses, stores, garages, alterations, etc., during the Amos 'n' Andy program, 7:00 to 7:15, evenings. At other times call 1200 and your 'proposition' will receive prompt attention."

Disgraceful Tariff Brazen Gouge of American People for Special Interests

AFTER spending seven months upon its consideration, the United States Senate has passed the most disgraceful tariff bill that body ever sent to conference.

In most respects the Smoot bill is worse than the Hawley bill sent over from the House. In many respects it is just as bad. And it would probably be worse in all respects than the Hawley bill but for the brave fight against tariff extortions waged in the Senate by a coalition of progressive Democrats and progressive Republicans.

This progressive coalition fought hard to limit tariff revision to those schedules which would protect what the farmer produces without increasing for him the cost of what he buys and the cost of living for everybody.

While this coalition was in control of the Senate, agriculture appeared to be in a fair way to obtain an equality with industry in tariff protection.

But with the break-up of that progressive coalition, the control of the Senate passed from the representatives of the PUBLIC INTEREST to the representatives of SPECIAL INTERESTS.

Although the Tariff Commission found no facts that would justify it, the tariff on sugar has been increased to a point that will add to the burden of the American people at least THIRTY-TWO MILLION DOLLARS a year.

Cement has been taken off the free list and the new tariff on cement, Senator Barkley of Kentucky estimates, will add FORTY MILLION DOLLARS to the annual burden of the American people. And Senator McMaster of South Dakota believes this burden will amount to more than FIFTY MILLION DOLLARS annually.

Lumber has been taken off the free list and the new tariff on lumber will add another burden of FORTY-FIVE MILLION DOLLARS to the annual tax bill of the American people.

In these three items alone the Senate has voted to take out of the pockets of the people in tariff duties ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY MILLION DOLLARS a year.

This has been done in defiance of the findings of fact of the Tariff Commission. This has been done in violation of the promises made by the Republican party in the last campaign.

This has been done in utter disregard of the recommendations of the President.

Unparalleled in the whole history of tariff legislation is the shifting of votes and reversals of judgment of which renegade Democrats and renegade Republicans have been guilty in recent weeks.

Certain Senators have shamelessly traded their votes and jumped from one side of the question to the other when the lobby pulled the strings.

And the ring-leader in this orgy of tariff extortion is none other than the veteran lobbyist of other years, SENATOR GRUNDY OF PENNSYLVANIA.

Sitting in the Senate today by appointment of the governor of his state, EX-LOBBYIST GRUNDY HAS WITHIN THE FIRST FEW MONTHS OF HIS SERVICE BECOME THE "BOSS" OF THE SENATE.

Nominally it is the Smoot bill still. BUT IN REALITY IT IS GRUNDY'S BILL.

And all that it requires to become Grundy's law IS THE SURRENDER OF THE CONFEREES OF THE TWO HOUSES TO GRUNDY'S ORDERS AND THE APPROVAL BY THE PRESIDENT OF GRUNDY'S HANDIWORK.

While other branches of the government are co-operating with leaders of industry the country over to hasten the return of prosperity, the United States Senate, under the domination of Grundy and the lobbyists, are jamming through the Senate an extortionate tariff that will add to the cost of living of the whole American people and take heavy toll of every American home.

If the conferees of the two Houses fail to purge the Grundy-Smoot-Hawley bill of their more flagrant extortions, and the President fails to veto this measure which violates his and his party's pledges, then the American people have a right to demand and secure A NEW PRESIDENT, A NEW HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, A NEW SENATE, AND A NEW PARTY IN CONTROL OF NATIONAL AFFAIRS.

"Come Home!"

SENATOR DAVID A. REED,
Member, American Delegation,
London Naval Conference.

HOW about coming home?

You, Senator Reed, went on the honor roll of the delegation on March 11 when one of the HALF-CASTE AMERICAN newspapers of New York, in a dispatch from London, listed you as opposed to committing America to any "consultation" pact or "security" pact for the benefit of foreign nations and the betrayal of your own country.

The dispatch said: "Senator David A. Reed has hitherto shown himself rather unfavorable to 'consultation' by the American delegation, and it is believed that Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow takes an analogous position."

THAT PUT YOU ON RECORD AS A FOE OF THIS NEW AND INSIDIOUS FORM OF FOREIGN ENTANGLEMENTS.

Way back on January 15 you had been stamped by the highest British authority as a champion of adequate American defence.

You were cited as a model on that date by Lord Bridgeman, Stanley Baldwin's former First Lord of the Admiralty, who ran circles around our boyish delegation to the abortive Geneva naval "disarmament conference" of 1927.

On January 15 of this year Lord Bridgeman said in the House of Commons:

"Senator Reed, the distinguished United States delegate at the conference, said at Philadelphia shortly before his appointment:

"'WE ARE NOT GOING TO EUROPE TO SCUTTLE THE AMERICAN NAVY.

"'WE ARE NOT GOING AS PACIFISTS.

"'WE DO NOT INTEND TO LEAVE THE UNITED STATES DEFENCELESS.

"'THE WORLD WOULD BE POORER IF THE NAVIES OF THE UNITED STATES AND GREAT BRITAIN WERE SUNK—THE SECURITY OF THE ENTIRE WORLD DEPENDS ON THE NAVIES OF CIVILIZED NATIONS.

"'WE WILL SEEK PARITY; WE WILL TRY FOR A PROPER BALANCE OF SHIPS. BUT WE ASSUREDLY WILL NOT DEPRIVE THE UNITED STATES OF ITS POWER OF DEFENCE.'"

Lord Bridgeman added: "These are wise words, and I believe they represent the spirit in which the British delegates should enter the conference."

You, Senator Reed, know that the simple American program of parity with Great Britain needs no elaborate conferences or secret diplomacy at London to make it clear.

HOW MUCH we must build to achieve parity depends solely on England. The Italian-French meddle, and all other European complications based on envy, jealousy and hatred, are none of our business.

We already know that even when we finish the 15-cruiser program, being held up by this conference, we shall still be 100,000 tons of cruisers behind parity with the 400,000 tons built or being built in England.

WHY NOT COME HOME, proceed with the construction of these cruisers and the aircraft carriers and modern submarines we need to achieve naval parity—and let the European powers make their own programs for their own maniac wars of annihilation.

It should be a source of satisfaction, Senator Reed, to note that the American policy of aloofness from European entanglements—YOUR policy, too—is being recognized by wise Englishmen as the best course for THEIR country.

In the Observer of March 15 J. L. Garvin said:

"INSTEAD OF INCREASING OUR EUROPEAN COMMITMENTS AND ENTANGLEMENTS, WE MUST REDUCE THEM. * * *

"UPON THIS THE MIND OF THE VAST MAJORITY OF THE BRITISH PEOPLE IS INEXORABLE, AND NO GOVERNMENT CAN CHANGE IT. * * *

"MINDING OUR OWN BUSINESS OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE GIVES US ENOUGH TO DO AND MORE THAN ENOUGH."

WHY NOT COME HOME, you and the rest of the delegation? Will not "minding OUR own business of the United States" likewise "GIVE US ENOUGH TO DO AND MORE THAN ENOUGH?"

P. S. You have read, Senator Reed, the cablegram sent your delegation a month ago by 1200 pacifists and League of Nations partisans in this country, urging you to make a security pact with European powers and NOT to build up to parity.

Perhaps you also read the Tokio dispatch last week, concerning the GREAT Japanese public meeting to advocate disarmament, with seventy-five persons present.

APPEASING THE GRUNDY GODS!

H. G. Wells Writes on "The Science of Life"

THE only really serious difficulty in dating rocks is the problem of relating the rock-systems of distant regions of the globe. The succession of rocks in China may be known, and also the succession in Western Europe; but the evidence may be lacking which enables us to say exactly how the one should be fitted against the other.

H. G. Wells

This may lead to uncertainty in points of detail; but even in such cases it is always possible to date within geologically moderate limits, and every scrap of new knowledge helps to narrow those limits down. Here again the difficulty is not one of principle.

The essential fact is this: fossils are not used to date rocks of doubtful age until they themselves have been dated by their position in rocks whose order is not doubtful but obvious. And the proof of the correctness of the method is that its results are coherent and intelligible.

We do not find ammonites appearing haphazard in the earth's crust, but in a definite set of its layers; mammals do not appear and disappear sporadically through geological time, but come on the scene when they are expected, and from then onward show a steady development; four-toed and one-toed horses are never found in the same stratum, and so forth.

If each fossil is a word in the Book of Life's history, then a century ago these words made only a few scattered but promising sentences; today, thanks to unceasing exploration, they have fallen into place, and have told man a new and clearer story of life's past and life's destiny.

2. Evolution of Horses

AND now let us take one of the better preserved sections from this vast, confused autobiography which life has written in the rocks.

It is loudly argued by many Creationists, and some Creationists that there is no fully worked-out pedigree of any existing forms of life, and that there is nothing to dispose of the view that at irregular intervals creative forces intervene in the evolving process and make life take a convulsive stride forward.

This, however, is not the case. There are now several family trees in existence. We are giving here the past record of the existing horses. They have been evolved from a small, four-toed Eocene mammal and every step in the process is traceable.

It is worth noting that the earliest known three-toed fossil horse was described as recently as 1860, the year after Darwin published the "Origin of Species," and that it was not until about 1870 that and serious attempt was or could be made to establish the horse's ancestry from fossils.

Many startling finds were made in the '70s and '80s, presenting the story in rough outline. But it has been the patient accumulation of specimens since then which has filled the details and made it convincing.

As the fossil-bearing rocks have been more intensively explored link after link has been brought to light, until now we are able to reconstruct an almost unbroken chain of change, extending over forty million years.

The existing horses constitute a very distinct family of animals. No other vertebrates have but one toe to each foot; and no other animals have quite similar teeth.

The family now comprises one genus only, called Equus and including sever species—two Asiatic wild asses (the onager and kiang) one African wild ass, the little Przevalsky's horse from Asia, and three kinds of zebra from Africa.

A fourth kind of zebra, the quagga, has recently been exterminated. In addition, there are, or course, the many varieties of domestic horse and donkey, brought into being by man's selective breeding.

Now all these wild horses and asses and zebras live in much the same way. They run swiftly over hard, level plains (wild asses in the Mongolian desert have been timed doing their forty miles per hour), and they feed on a food that is difficult to chew—on the tough leaves and stems of grasses which are often hardened by a certain amount of flinty matter.

Is Mr. Eastman Wrong? ... Man Is Not Born Free, but He Is

The BAER Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

PHILADELPHIA society woman says she is bringing up her children to drink like ladies and gentlemen.

If that experiment is a success there are some slightly shopworn orphans who would like to be adopted by that same motherly bootlegger.

The Quaker City matron has answered the question without solving the situation. The trouble with our girls and boys is that they are all drinking like gentlemen.

We do not know how a gentleman should drink because we have never been one.

The proper method for bringing on the purple hooglies in England is to sip. Your English Duke believes in a war of attrition and muzzles his brimming beaker until stalastites of sodium carbonate form upon his gloomy mustache.

Over in France the student of Alcojeebies are as slow and as cautious as a bat waiting for twilight. They get their cognac in a large aquarium and bring on that glorious wave of delirium horrockers by dunking the nose in the fuming bowl.

All a Frenchman does with a drink is to sniffle it until he is muzzled. He can make a dime's worth of cognac last an hour and have enough left over for a shampoo.

The French rummols is a nose-dunker and would be horrified at the sight of an American liquorite swamping himself in fermented cloudbursts.

The American gentleman is a gulper of the old school, college and post-graduate course. He must drink fast and accurately because he never knows where his next hiccough is coming from.

If Mrs. Philadelphia desires her staggering offspring to guzzle like gents and ladies she should send them for a finishing course in the fashionable European distilleries.

There is more than one way to marcel a cat. Alcohol is very final in its ultimate reprisals. You can earn your diploma from any life extension bureau by accumulating capillary tremors, cirrhosis of the liver and inflammation of the brake bands.

No Duty Needed

Tariff on Cement Will Hurt Our Port.

THE TARIFF BILL proposition to impose a duty on Belgian cement, which would be practically prohibitive, strikes a severe blow at the port of Boston.

Boston receives about 400,000 barrels of Belgian cement annually, figured at about twenty steamship loads. This furnishes work for longshoremen unions, trucking and warehouse concerns, not to mention the steamship agencies and ship brokers who get revenue from it. These twenty steamships also bring other important freight for Boston, all of which will be missed, if a high duty wipes out cement importations. Importation of cement to this country is about a fraction of the total production, some 180,000,000 barrels, figuring at less than 10 per cent of this, so that no important American industry is threatened. No duty is needed.

Our Massachusetts representatives in Congress ought to be highly interested in this item of the tariff bill, as indeed should every New England representative. It's a good-sized bite at the business of the port.

Flowers Will Help

AND now comes the Flower Show at a time of the year when we are perhaps at the lowest point mentally and physically, after winter's trying weather. Your mental viewpoint is given a new uptwist by the flowers of spring. Nowhere can you see them in any finer display than at the Flower Show, now on. For this Tercentenary Year, a house 100 years old, surrounded by an old-fashioned garden, is one of the things you ought to see. President Hoover roses will be shown in Boston for the first time and there will be lilacs in bloom. The Flower Show will help you. Just like a Spring tonic.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, March 25—Chinatown, with the passing of Charlie Boston, is without a self-appointed mayor for the first time in many years. It is probable, too, that there will never be another ruler in the queer medley of twisted streets spraying off Chatham sq.

* * *

The Chinese quarter is no longer a transplanted bit of Orient. With its almost complete Americanization it has bowed to the laws of its adopted country. Sawed off shot guns do not run the streets red with blood. Tong battles are becoming memories.

* * *

Slip-slopping sandals, knives strapped inside kimonoed sleeves and such have vanished with queues. Charlie Boston symbolized the change. He had taken a Western name and a Western religion. Although he founded On Leon Tong, he was, in the sunset of life, a peacemaker.

A Chinese Presbyterian minister officiated at the funeral and Charlie was buried in a tight-fitting dinner coat and his ankles were incased in fawn spats. The only concession to the religion of his forefathers was a sheaf of wheat in his coffin for the "spirits."

The half-lidded indifference and aura of mysticism once characterising Chinatown have given away to a new world alertness and a glassy glitter in cafes and shops. Very few trademen have living quarters there any more. It subsists almost entirely upon patronage of sight-seers.

INDEED, many believe Chinatown squalor is doomed. A real estate development is in the making which may transform its dingy bowels and underground catacombs into a public square around which will arise model and sanitary tenements.

In the past 10 years, Chinese have displayed an amazing aptitude for Occidental business methods. With few exceptions, all the big restaurants on Broadway are Chinese. In greater New York there are 983 Chinese eating places. Fifth ave. has six imposing stores given over to Chinese importations.

Indeed, so swift is the transformation that a Chinese art store has a Chinese clerk with a monocle and an Oxonian accent. And in the dancing haunts there is a Chinese gigolo.

A wealthy New Yorker five years ago gave his son $200 upon graduation from college and told him to shift for himself. The father refused even to assist in securing the boy a position. Last week the lad was made vice-president of an industrial concern at $15,000 a year. But despite his success he refuses to speak to his father.

* * *

LIFE is the sort of pessimist, I writes a lady of her husband, who takes an unholy delight in the discovery that when the figures of 1930 are added together they make thirteen.

A hotel in the Grand Central zone has specialized for some time in breakfasts of sage tangy country sausage and buckwheat cakes. They attribute a 75 per cent increase in breakfast patronage to the menu.

BROADWAY of this generation remembers when he was "Swifty, the messenger boy," busking along the curbs. His showmanship was wheeled on the city's flagstones to a keenness that has made him one of the foremost American producers. And his hat fits him still.
